U. S. Liners Refuse to Carry Ammunition to Allies

AMERICAN LINE WILL CARRY NO MORE ARMS

No ammunition or other contraband of war will hereafter be carried on American Line ships, the only transatlantic company whose vessels sail between American and Europe under the stars and stripes. This is believed not only to provide a means of safe transportation for citizens of this country to Europe, but may provide a way to settle the difficulty between the United States and Germany.

This announcement was made today by the New England agents of the American Line.

Germany has claimed that British and French lines carried Americans as passengers to protect their ships from German attack when they were laden with supplies for the armies of the Allies. That, in the main, is stated unofficially as the excuse for sinking the Lusitania. If Americans sail on the ships flying the American flag and carrying no war munitions for the allies they are safe from submarine attack. German submarines will have no excuse for sinking an American Line ship.

The German government guaranteed this in its last note to the United States, sent Tuesday, which included the following statement:

"The Imperial German Government has naturally no intention of causing to be attacked by submarine or air craft such neutral ships of commerce in the zone of naval warfare, more reliitnely described in the notice of the German Admiralty staff, of February 4th last, as had been guilty of no hostile act; on the contrary, the most definite instructions have been repeatedly issued to German war vessels to avoid attacks on such ships under all circumstances. Even such ships as have contraband of war on board are to be dealt with by submarines solely according to the rule of international law applying to prize warfare.

Should a neutral ship nevertheless come to harm through German submarines or aircraft on account of an unfortunate (committed world) in the above mentioned zone of naval warfare, the German government will unreservedly recognize its responsibility therefore. In such a case it will express its regret and afford damages without first instituting a prize court action.

A Washington dispatch said today that Germany may agree to discontinue its submarine warfare against passenger vessels if the United States will prevent ships of that class—whether neutral or belligerent—from clearing from American ports with arms or ammunition aboard. They can carry foodstuffs, however.

Agents of the Anchor Line in Boston today received instructions to take full addresses of all passengers booking for sailings and to see that the passports bear photographs of the passengers.

The Transylvania is an Anchor Line steamer, chartered to the Cunard Line.

Who'll Pay the Doctors' Rent?

WOULDN'T you like to see the doctors all worrying about where the next month's rent is coming from?

Not that you have anything against the doctors, but just because it would denote a healthy people.

Of course, it isn't possible to do that, but if JESS WILLARD'S rules are followed carefully, there is no doubt that those who follow them will be greatly benefited at the expense of doctors.

Beginning May 16, the SUNDAY AMERICAN will print JESS WILLARD'S health advice every week.

He became the world's greatest athlete because he took his own advice.

Be sure your newsdealer has your order for the AMERICAN for May 16 and the following Sundays.

Suffrage Marching Song

(This song, which will sung by suffragist volunteers on the Common this afteon at 4 o'clock, is copyrighted, 1914, by Fanny C. Later and Florence L. Lent. International copyright secl.)

Awake! Awake! ye sis all, In this our glorious land,
And muster to the busil, to lend a helping hand;
To settle strife where: be rife, good will to all and cheer,
Clean government, new of life, God's will on earth be here.

Let woman take the hand steer out on that murky sea;
Her decks of great anaft she'll clear, a tidy sailor she.
Four points her compasin will show: Hope, Charity and Love,
And Faith, for with thee may know of the serpent and the dove.

Her wish is not to guilone the Ship of State so grand,
But watch and watch it with man unto the Promised Land.
That Promised Land dion fair, but not too fair to be,
For all that conscious I may dare, this world will surely see.

Cut this and bring it with you.

OFFER GIOLITTI A PLACE IN CABINET

By BRIXTON D'ALLAIRE,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

ROME, May 15.—Despite his unpopularity, former Premier Giolitti, leader of the anti-war party, has been offered a place in the cabinet that Guiseppe Marcora is trying to form. Signor Marcora, who is president of the chamber, held a long conference with Signor Giolitti today while a mob in this city was burning an effigy of the pacifist leader.

War riots continue and many Germans and Austrians are being attacked in the street. Hundreds of troops from nearby cities have been brought here, and Rome has been divided into four military zones.

The action of the press favoring war against Austria announces "that the truth is gradually coming out that Italy is pledged to fight to behalf of the allies." It is reported that that part of the triple alliance treaty concerning Austria has been abrogated. It is further reported that the old cabinet entered into a treaty with the allies.

War preparations have reached a final stage. Following an urgent council of the government, orders were wired to the prefects in Italy to hand over their powers to the military authorities if deemed necessary, and in most instances it was done. This was a virtual declaration of war and put the kingdom in a state of siege.

A crowd of 20,000 made a hostile demonstration in front of the German and the Austrian embassies, crying "Down with the Kaiser."

In spite of the military guards around the embassies it looked for a time as though the buildings would actually be attacked.

Former Premier Giolitti, leader of the peace party, has been requested to submit his policy to Parliament or cdiate when it convenes on May 18. The King is reported to have given definite assurances that he will not exercise his supreme prerogative, but will allow Parliament to decide whether Italy is to remain neutral or go to war against the Teutonic allies.

REPORT DERNBURG RECALLED

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, former German Minister of the Colonies, who has been regarded as the official spokesman in America of the Kaiser, is reported to have been recaled to Berlin. Dr. Dernburg has been living in New York.

"Dr. Bernhard Dernburg will not leave the United States at the request of the State Department. The question of his recall has not been taken up officially in any department of the government so far as I know."

Secretary of State Bryan said this today in denying a report that the government would request the official publicity agent of the German government to leave the United States. Mr. Bryan said that he was not advised whether Dr. Dernburg intended to leave of his own volition.

A New York dispatch today said that Dr. Dernburg had made plans to leave the country of his own initiative within a short time.

President at Sea, in Wireless Touch

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Worn out by the strain of the strenuous events of the week, President Wilson hopes to get a good rest on his voyage to New York, where he will review the fleet.

The Mayflower, carrying the President and his party, which left the Washington navy yard last night, will arrive at New York early Monday morning. In the meantime the yacht will be in wireless communication with land, and the President will be apprised of any developments in the German-American situation.

British Stop Two Steamers Off New York

NEW YORK, May 15.—British cruisers showed renewed activity off the American coast today when they halted and sent crews aboard two outbound British steamers. The holdups occurred off the Jersey coast about five miles southeast of Atlantic Highlands. The identity of the British cruisers could not be learned.

The first steamer boarded was the Volunia, bound to New Orleans for cargo. She was allowed to proceed after her papers were examined. The second steamer was the Ionia, bound with cargo for Volo, Greece. The crews from the warships remained on board for a long time.

3000 in Tramway Strike in London

LONDON, May 15.—Employes of the London tramway system went on strike today because of the refusal of a war bonus. Three thousand men refused to work, completely disorganizing traffic in the city and compelling thousands to walk to work. Bus men are expected to join the strike, which it is feared, will become general.

Many Injured in New York Wreck

SCARSBOROUGH, N. Y., May 15.—One man was fatally injured, another seriously, possibly fatally, and a score of others thrown from their seats and bruised, here today when an electric locomotive on the New York Central crashed into the rear of a local New York-Albany train.

GREAT ANXIETY FOR THREATENED LINER

ABERDEEN, Scot., May 15. — The Danish steamship Martha, a vessel of 1,182 tons, was torpedoed and sunk in the North Sea today by a German submarine. The members of her crew were saved. The Martha hailed from Copenhagen.

The possible fate of the big British liner Transylvania, carrying 120 Americans among her 900 passengers, today overshadows in public interest throughout the United States even the developments of the diplomatic correspondence between Washington and Berlin.

The Transylvania is due today off the coast of Ireland, where the Lusitania was torpedoed. A warning from German sources just before her sailing was to the effect that the Transylvania would be the next large liner torpedoed.

GRAVE CRISIS IN TRANSYL VANIA CASE.

Administration officials at Washington and the American public in general are also concerned because of the grave consequences which would probably ensue if the Transylvania was successfully attacked by German submarines.

There have been many rumors in Boston and elsewhere, apparently without foundation, in fact, that the liner has already been sunk.

Nothing had been heard of the Transylvania at the Boston Cunard offices early today. Many inquiries were received at the AMERICAN office, both from anxious callers and over the telephones.

A Harvard professor stated that the college wireless station had received a message that the Transylvania had been sunk. News of the disaster to the ship was also rumored at the Charlestown Navy Yard, but the yard wireless operator denied receiving any word about the Transylvania.

Vacancies in Apartments And Houses Are Here Today

But gone tomorrow. Every day is moving-day in Boston. New tenants move in, old tenants vacate. There are always vacancies to fit every need. Some families only require a couple of rooms, while others need eight or ten.

No matter what kind of a suite or house is wanted, something to fill the needs of the most particular tenant is listed in the "Apartment to Let and Houses to Let" columns of the Boston AMERICAN.

The AMERICAN is Boston's renting medium. Wise owners and progressive brokers list their vacancies in this paper. "Nothing Succeeds Like Circulation." If you have an empty suite or house, for which you want desirable tenants, use the Boston AMERICAN. Telephone your ad to Main 5180, or leave it at

GERMAN COMPROMISE HINT IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Diplomats here believe Germany will end her submarine warfare against all passenger vessels from the United States if this government will guarantee they do not carry any munitions of war.

A high official of the State Department declared today he thought the United States might do this in the same way as the Federal government has indicted persons for carrying explosives on passenger trains because they were a menace to other passengers.

It was further pointed out that a settlement on this basis would be to the mutual advantage of Germany and the United States. The United States would gain all that it is contending for and would forfeit none of its rights.

It would still preserve the right to sell munitions of war to any of the belligerent powers in a position to purchase and transport such munitions. The fact that purchasers of munitions of war would have increased difficulty in delivery would be a concern of the purchasing government and not of the United States.

WHY GERMANY MAY YIELD.

Whatever disadvantages Germany would suffer through the conceded restriction on her submarine warfare would be more than offset by the advantage she would gain in having munitions from the United States destined for her enemies sent on slow cargo vessels.

The reason the British have been shipping munitions on passenger ships is that these ships have a much better chance of getting by a submarine. In fact up to the time of the sinking of the Lusitania it was thought that the big ships, because of their speed, ran very little, if any, risk from submarines.

This explains why a convoy was not sent out to meet the Lusitania, despite the fact that several torpedo destroyers were stationed not far distant from the point where the torpedoing of the big ship took place.

Other reasons advanced in support of the belief that Germany will yield included the following:

Refusal to do so would alienate the neutral nations whose influence in the event of Germany's defeat may go a long way toward preventing dismemberment of the German nation.

The possibility that other neutral nations may follow the lead of the United States.

Some of these nations occupy positions of strategic importance. Holland, for example, has 400,000 men on her frontier about twenty-five miles from Essen, the headquarters of the Krupp works.

"The fact that the entry of the United States into the war would influence this country to manufacture more of the deadly American shells than ever before for Germany's enemies.

A desire to vindicate German culture from the opprobrium that has been heaped upon her.

HOW DO NEUTRALS STAND

Next to the direct issue between the United States and Germany, greatest interest attaches to the probable attitude of the neutral nations. It was learned in this connection that while the United States government probably understands that other neutrals are with it in sentiment at least, it has not been advised that they will support its demands.

According to one of the highest officials of the State Department, this government does not know whether the neutral nations are back of it or not.

The suggestion that there is an understanding between this government and some at least of the other neutrals was further disposed of at several of the legations most interested, where it was stated positively that they had had no communication with the United States on the subject.

One diplomat expressed the view that it was "Fifty per cent. likely" that the other neutral nations would back up the United States. It was admitted everywhere, however, that the other neutral nations feel as the United States feels, that international law as it existed when the war broke out must be upheld.

NOTE IS DELAYED.

President Wilson's note was delayed in transmission because of congested cables and probably will not be presented by Ambassador Gerard to the Minister of Foreign Affairs in Berlin until some time today.

The note had been sent over the French cable from New York to Havre and thence by telegraph through France to the American Embassy at Rome.

Inasmuch as it would require a few hours to decipher the note, it was believed by State Department officials that it would not be ready for presentation until late last evening, and unless Ambassador Gerard had arranged a special engagement with the Foreign Minister it probbly would not be read to Mr. von Jagow until today.

It will take a week at least for the answer from Germany to the American note to be prepared and received here, in the opinion of diplomatists and officials.

Divided on Move to Slice the Common To Hear Opponents of Park Street Plan

Merchants Discuss Proposal to Ease Traffic Conditions and Beautify Thoroughfare.

The proposition to slice a long, wedge-shaped strip from the Park street side of Boston Common to give Park street uniform width, ease traffic congestion and offer wider approach to the State House is a source of lively difference of opinion among townsfolk.

Even merchants along Park street itself, on the side facing the Common, are not agreed in their opinions.

Park street business men and others in favor of the idea have been heard by the Boston Street Commissioners. No opponents appeared, but it is understood that these may have a hearing if they request one.

The Boston Common Society has previously opposed any slicing of the Common at Park street, as the plan has been suggested before. Historical societies which have fought for the integrity of this historic ground, presumably have the same opinion about this Park street project as they have shown regarding other efforts to encroach upon the Common.

NOW A ONE-WAY TRAFFIC.

Two months ago the street commissioners made Park street a one-way thoroughfare. Traffic is allowed from Tremont up Park street, not the other way.

Now it is suggested that Park street be made uniformly 60 feet wide. At present it is 45 feet wide at Tremont street and 60 feet at the head of the street, where it touches Beacon street.

To give it uniform width of sixty feet would require taking a slice off the Common fifteen feet wide at Park street and narrowing down to an apex at Beacon street, roughly speaking. It would remove from the Common a strip shaped like a narrow piece of pie, with the crust at the Tremont street end. With this strip, also, would go several trees.

Varying opinions of Park street tenants today included these:

PROTESTS ANY CHANGE.

William Crane of Rand & Crane at No. 3:

"I am opposed to any radical change on this street. It is satisfactory to me. I don't care to have the Common touched."

Andrew McCance of Smith & McCance at No. 2:

"I am opposed to taking any of the Common. I believe the trouble will be corrected by making Park street a two-way street again."

Thomas F. Galvin, florist:

"From an artistic point of view I am in favor of widening Park street, even though it means taking part of the Common. The trees along the street are nearly all dead. We could beautify the approach to the State House by a more beautiful street and get it, too, without taking much from the Common. At present that side of the Common is unsightly."

Among the business men who favored the project at the hearing were L. J. Brackett, treasurer of Thomas F. Galvin, Inc.; Frank D. Somers, Julius A. Zinn, Henry R. Cormley, Carl H. Skinner, D. Bourdon and W. P. Bullard.

Germans Rush to Become U. S. Citizens

NEW YORK, May 15.—Since the sinking of the Lusitania the Federal Naturalization Bureau has experienced a rush of business. Charles A. Weiser, the naturalization commissioner in the Federal Building, says: "The number of Germans who have applied for citizenship papers since the Lusitania was sunk has increased enormously."

GERMAN PAPER GIVES WARNING FOR NEUTRALS

LONDON, May 15.—A copy of the Cologne Gazette of May 10, just received, contains an editorial headed, "To Neutrals." The official connection of the Cologne Gazette, apart from the ordinary government supervision of the press, makes the inference strong that the editorial was inspired by the German government.

"The Lusitania was to us a hostile ship. To destroy it was our right and duty. We are now the objects of bitter rage and are called Huns, barbarians and murderers, simply because German smartness and bravery accomplished a brilliant stroke. But now the neutrals are warned; they have seen the bloody seriousness of our submarine warfare, and let them abstain from further foolhardiness, for the fate of the Lusitania will be shared by other English steamships, and every neutral who trusts himself to them courts the fate which overtook the passengers of the Lusitania. The abuse of the neutral press up to now can be dismissed as an expression of naivete which was not conscious of the gravity of the affair. If the abuse continues it will no longer be naive, but impertinent."

FRENCH REPORT 500-METRE GRAIN NORTH OF ARRAS

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PARIS, May 15.—A gain of 500 metres for the French north of Arras is reported in an official communique issued by the French War Office today.

An artillery duel of the utmost violence is raging in the sector of Arras, each side pitting its heaviest artillery against the other. The French gain was made toward Souchez, seven miles from Arras, in the direction of a sugar mill which the Germans occupied and fortified.

The text of the communique follows:

"There have occurred no changes since yesterday evening in the situation north of the Arras, where the battle continues under conditions indicated by the last communique.

"We have advanced 500 metres in the direction of Sucrelle from Souchez. A violent bombardment from both sides has occurred throughout this section."

Sixty Autos Burned.

SANDUSKY, O., May 15.—Fire today destroyed the garage of M. J. Caswell, burning sixty automobiles. Loss was estimated at $100,000.

Badly Burned by Gasoline.

HOLYOKE, May 15.—Cheder Skbard, a window washer, probably was fatally burned today by the ignition of a pail of gasoline which he was using in a garage. Enveloped in flames, he ran down Herd street, followed by two men with fire extinguishers. He was finally tripped up by Major A. F. Foote.

GERMANS DRIVEN BACK IN NORTH

By FREDERICK BENNET.

Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PETROGRAD, May 15.—All Germans in the north now have been forced to the westward of the River Dubissa. They have a small force at Libau, where the Russians a month ago emptied the grain elevators when Baltic grain exports were stopped. The Germans have two corps much weakened, above East Prussia, chiefly on the road to Tauroggen.

The invasion was permitted because the Russian general staff had determined to continue preparations for an advance in Poland to frustrate Mackensen's movements eastward below Cracow.

General Mackensen's army now is in a difficult position, exhausted and without fresh reserves.

Russian cavalry hold both banks of the Vistula near its junction with the Nida and continues successful flank attacks while Mackensen's infantry is engaged in frontal attacks along the Dunajec.

In eastern Galicia, where the intensity of the fighting has lessened, the Russians are concentrating on the Dniester, with the object of occupying a shorter front.

Petrograd reports the Austrian army evacuated a strongly fortified position ninety-four miles long from the Bistritza River to the Roumanian frontier in Bukowina, and fallen back beyond the River Pruth.

Vienna admits strong Russian forces are operating in Bukowina.

HARVARD CRIMSON SUPPORTS WILSON

The Harvard Crimson has posted in the Crimson office for students' signatures a letter to President Wilson, endorsing his stand and pledging support if "use of force be necessary." The letter reads:

"We, the undersigned members of Harvard University, beg to assure you that we endorse the stand you have taken in regard to the sacred rights, not only of Americans, but of all mankind; and that we have confidence in your wisdom and justice. It is our hope and our prayer that, under your guidance, this country may keep God's peace, but if in upholding this country's dignity and honor, you deem recourse to use of force necessary, we pledge you our support."

Editorially the Crimson says regarding this pledge:

"The Crimson believes that it is expressing the feeling of every man in the university when it assures President Wilson that members of the university approve the stand he has taken at this critical period in the history of our country."

Will Intern Aliens in South Africa

PRETORIA, South Africa, May 15.—The English home government, the government of South Africa, has decided to intern all alien enemies of military age. The naturalized Germans and Austrians will be given ample protection by military authorities, it was stated, but they were warned to do nothing to excite public feeling. Sporadic outbursts of anti-German rioting continued today.

SHELL BRITISH OUT OF YPRES TRENCH

Boston American and London Times Exclusive Cable Service.

LONDON, May 15.—The military expert of the London Times says:

"In northern France the German bombardment of the allied positions around Ypres continued today, followed by an infantry attack on one of the British divisions northeast of the town. The attack was handsomely repulsed but the vigor of the bombardment at another point caused the evacuation of a short length of trench without ill effect to the general position. The weight of the German metal at this quarter is due to the use of guns hitherto reserved for coast defence.

"The allies have ample reserves near Ypres and the situation there is well in hand. Elsewhere along the front, the British artillery carried out a continuous deliberate bombardment.

"The British have caused a loss to the Germans of 10,000 men in the last few days. The allies' operations will continue in close co-operation with increasing vigor. The partial destruction of the Freiburg corps gives particular satisfaction."

RUSSIANS HAVE NO FEAR OF LOSS OF PRZEMYSL

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY

Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PETROGRAD, May 15.—Although General von Mackensen's Austro-German army has come to grips with the Russian centre on a line paralleling the San River in Galicia, no fears are felt here over the possible loss of Przemysl.

Dispatches from Lemberg state that the Russians have taken up positions of great strength on the heights of the San, where they have mustered an enormous quantity of artillery and erected strong defensive works. Both in Galicia and in Southern Poland, where the Russians retired to strategic territory east of Kielce, the Russian lines are being stiffened with reinforcements.

Field Marshal Von Hindenburg is reported to be hurrying German troops to Bukowina, where the Austrians are in retreat from the Bistritza river to the Roumanian frontier, over a line nearly one hundred miles long.

The battle at Shavli continues without result.

LONDON CALLS WILSON NOTE EVENT OF WAR

LONDON, May 15.—The Westminster Gazette, discussing the relations between the United States and Germany, says today:

We count this note (President Wilson's protest to Germany) from all moral and human points of view the greatest event of this war.

"LUSITANIA HAD LIVING RAMPART OF AMERICANS"

By FREDERICK WERNER.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

BERLIN, May 15.—The destruction of the Lusitania by a German submarine was vigorously defended in the following editorial in the German Vossische Zeitung today:

The Lusitania could not be mistaken. She had no idea of being mistaken. She had no need to alter her course because of German submarines. Her protection was a living rampart of American passengers who were to insure that the 5,400 cases of ammunition in the liner's hold should not be touched.

That they were being made use of in this way was concealed from the Americans. That must be the point from which the American government must start in going into the Lusitania case.

It has to consider whether one can allow one belligerent State to stake the lives of American citizens in order to secure the conveyance of contraband. That it is not altogether free of responsibility the American government can scarcely conceal from itself.

Criticism of the American government's breach of "diplomatic etiquette" was voiced in official circles today because it had allowed publication of President Wilson's note of protest before the document was formally presented.

The text of the note reached Berlin from unofficial sources Friday, thus coming to the notice of the Foreign Office.

Ambassador James W. Gerard was in communication with the Foreign Office and the opinion was whispered the note had already been handed in. The confusion attending the presentation of this important document had led to many and various reports both in and out of official circles.

BARRON SAYS GERMANS HERE DEPLORE ACT

Clarence W. Barron, publisher of the Boston News Bureau, says he believes that if Germany understands the sentiment of the people of this country, she will promptly change her tactics.

"What has surprised me most in studying the subject, is the sentiment of German-American citizens in this country," he says.

"Many of the men with whom I have talked and whose relations have been with Germany have become intensely patriotic since the sinking of the Lusitania.

"I hear there are movements under way in this country among American citizens of German birth to make clear to Germany that the sentiment of this country is back of behind President Wilson.

"I have even heard that it has been proposed in so-called German-American circles that if Germany refuses to make reparation for the sinking of the Lusitania, the German-Americans in this country will offer to raise an indemnification fund on their own account."

Girl with Broken Arm Leads Her Class

SCOTT CITY, Kansas, May 15.—Esther Kelson, the 12-year-old daughter of Representative Keleon of Scott county, fell and rebroke her arm while roller skating on the sidewalk.

The next day after the accident she went to school. Her teacher was giving examinations and excused Esther, but she used her left hand. She received the best grade in the class.

Marshall War Opinion Makes Him Unpopular

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Vice-President Marshall is one of the most unpopular officials in administration circles in Washington today. While officers of the government do not comment openly on the subject it was made clear that some remarks attributed to the Vice-President were extremely distasteful to the administration. The criticism was based on the following press dispatch:

Tupelo, Miss., May 13.—Vice-President Thomas R. Marshall, speaking here on "National Tendencies," advised caution on the part of the United States in dealing with the delicate problem presented by the sinking of the Lusitania.

The Vice-President said he considered that when a person boarded an English vessel he was virtually on English soil and must expect to stand the consequences.

He said there were too many men in the United States crying for war who would not enlist unless given a position of selling goods to the commissary department.

The Vice-President's opinion concerning a person taking passage on an English vessel is diametrically opposed to that set forth in the American note to Germany written by President Wilson.

The Marshall view was expressed in some quarters that Mr. Marshall had been out of touch with newspapers, which had represented the feeling of indignation among the President and his advisers over the sinking of the Lusitania, but few of those who commented on Mr. Marshall's remarks were at charitably disposed. Nor was any relish shown for Mr. Marshall's reflection contained in the last paragraph of the press dispatch.

TAFT PRAISES WILSON'S NOTE ON LUSITANIA

NEW YORK, May 15.—Ex-President Taft praised the note to Germany in the highest terms at a dinner of Methodist laymen and ministers, and afterward assisted in drawing up a telegram to President Wilson expressing their approval of the note.

Mr. Taft was called upon a little later and said: "I wish to congratulate you on the resolution you have sent to the President of the United States. I concur fully with the language in which Bishop Wilson has characterized the note.

"Admirable in tone, moderate in the judicial spirit that ran through the entire communication, dignified in the level that the writer takes with respect to internal obligations, accurate in its statement of international law, he puts the case for the United States in a way that may well call for our earnest concurrence and confirmation.

"And while I am not a member of your body, I would suggest to the chairman and the secretary that the resolution should include—for I believe that the spirit of the body justifies me in making the suggestion—a distinct reference to the expression of the chief magistrate of this nation of the position of the United States in reference to the issue which his note treated.

"I make that suggestion because I have been President myself and I know what you like when you are engaged in the performance of a duty of the critical character he in engaged in, is a specific and definite approval, so that your support hits the mark. I have mistaken the spirit of this meeting if that is not what you want to do."

After the meeting Colonel E. W. Halford, U. S. A., retired, who presided, said Mr. Taft's outline the resolution as it should be. Mr. Taft sat down and wrote the substance of the telegram which was sent to President Wilson in the following form:

New York.
President Wilson, White House, Washington.

Nine hundred Methodist men of New York city, assembled at dinner, request me to express to you their full approval of the note to Germany in which, with admirable clearness, moderation, accuracy and justice, is stated the case of the United States in the present crisis, and to assure you of their cordial sympathy and support.

E. W. HALFORD, Chairman.

The gathering stood and cheered the mention of the name of President Wilson by the chairman and while they were on their feet for the standing vote in favor of the telegram somebody started "America" and all joined in singing it.

Among the passengers who sailed on the Anchor liner Transylvania were sixty-five from New England. Of these, twenty-one came from Boston and the Metropolitan District. All the sixty-five New Englanders went second or third class, fifteen in the former and fifty in the latter.

Those from Boston and the Metropolitan District include:

Second cabin—Mary Healy, Boston; Miss L. Jackson, Boston; T. J. Minife, Boston, and Miss Alice Waker, Boston.

Third cabin—Edith, John and James Ainsworth, Boston; George Brotherston, Boston; Agnes Brennan, Boston; Margaret Connolly, Boston; Michael Holland, Boston; Hugh J. Jordan, Quincy; Harry Kehwell, Revere; James Kennedy, Boston; Patrick McNally, Boston; Clara Miles, Boston; Ernest Steeling, Malden; Elna M. Stokes, Wakefield, and Leon G. Yenell, Mrs. Yenell and Leon, Jr., of Malden.

Leon G. Yenell, who is superintendent of the manufacturing plant of the E. V. Yenell & Company manufacturers of etched metal name plates, on Middlesex court, Malden, intends to enlist in the British army. Mr. Yenell's home is at No. 47 Mount Vernon street, Malden. He is prominent in soccer football circles, having been a member of the crack English soccer team which met the Scottish team in the international contests held in Boston last year. His wife was Miss Jennie Higgins of Medford.

PLANNED TO ENLIST.

Ernest Steeling, assistant janitor of the Malden Y. M. C. A., sailed on the Transylvania to visit his old home in Peckham, South England. He had informed some of his friends that he might enlist.

One of the New England passengers outside of the Metropolitan district is Miss Mary Gildey of No. 229 Bay street, Taunton. She is forty-two years old and a native of England. After three years' employment in this country, as domestic in the home of Charles Asbury of Taunton, she started home to Sheffield, England, to live. She has a brother, Walter Gildey, in Taunton, five other brothers in England, and three nephews at the front.

Attleboro has three people on the Transylvania list, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Riley and son of Wall grove. Mr. Riley, who is a jewelry worker, had cancelled sailings on the Lusitania and the Transylvania as safer. The family was going to Birmingham to help celebrate the golden wedding of Mrs. Riley's parents.

Peter Corrigan [illegible] 48 Tracy street, Providence, was returning to Ireland to live at the age of sixty-eight. He came from Tyrone twenty-three years ago, giving his money to his daughter, Mrs. Mary Fay, who has twelve children. Coming to Providence he worked for the gas company and saved his money. He left Providence April 4 and for New York city. On May 2 he wrote his niece, Miss Louise Corrigan of Providence, from No. 442 West Twenty-third street, New York, that he was unable to get accommodations on the Lusitania, and would take the next boat.

MONTAGUE PASSENGERS.

The Transylvania list gives Mr. and Mrs. G. Collister of Montague, Mass., as second cabin passengers. Mr. and Mrs. George J. Collister (or Callister) came to Montague, in Franklin County, from Ontario, Canada, having previously come from England. Mr. Collister attended Ontario College and was recommended to the Montague Agricultural School.

They lived with Miss Mary Nichols of Sunderland road. Three years and a half ago Collister moved to New York, where he was connected with the Herman Keil Company, 291 Pearl street. He was called to England by the death of her sister, but it was not known by Montague that her husband intended to cross, too.

It was reported that James Stephens of New Bedford, wife and two children, were to sail on the Transylvania, having missed the Lusitania, but the Transylvania's list fails to show their names.

Germans Charge Ammunition Blew Up On Lusitania

BERLIN, via Amsterdam to London, May 15.—From the report received from the submarine which sank the Lusitania, the following official version of the incident is published by the German admiralty staff under the signature of Admiral Behncke:

"The submarine sighted the steamer, which showed no flag, May 7, at 2:20 o'clock, Central European time, afternoon, on the southeast coast of Ireland in fine, clear weather.

At 3.10 o'clock one torpedo was fired at the Lusitania, which hit her starboard side below the captain's bridge. The detonation of the torpedo was followed immediately by a further explosion of extremely strong effect. The ship quickly listed to starboard and began to sink.

The second explosion must be traced back to the ignition of quantities of ammunition inside the ship.

Seachlights Aid Watch on Liner

To make sure that the liner was not getting steam up, powerful searchlights at the Navy Yard played on the four funnels of the Kronprintessin Cecilie in East Boston all night. At short intervals the rays rested on the giant stacks, being worked up and down for some seconds each time.

SEA GIVES UP BODIES SLOWLY

QUEENSTOWN, May 15.—Hope for the recovery of the bodies of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Elbert Hubbard and other prominent Americans who lost their lives when the Lusitania was torpedoed is slowly dying out. A Storm prevented the tug Flying Fish from continuing the search for bodies today. It is believed that many bodies are still pinned in the wreckage of the liner, and the advisability of sending down divers has been considered.

Two more of the twenty-eight bodies brought in last night were identified this morning as those of "Anna Hill" of Toronto, Ont., and Mrs. Harry J. Keser, an American. Cards in the clothing of the former bore the name of "Anna Hill," but this name does not appear in the Lusitania's passenger list. There are five bodies upon the Flying Fish, one of which is believed to be that of Rev. Father Basil William Maturin of Oxford.

Other bodies have been identified as those of A. L. Hopkins, president of the Newport News Shipbuilding Company; Robert Edward Dewbergh of No. 317 West fifty-eighth street, New York; G. L. Ferson, of New York and London; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Crompton of Philadelphia; Mrs. William Crichton of New York, Surgeon F. P. Mellersmut of the Lusitania, and George Tiberchien, a saloon passenger. Three of the bodies appear to be those of members of the crew.

A number of bodies of Lusitania victims are aboard the American liner New York, which sailed for Liverpool today. They include the bodies of Charles Frohman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Plamondon of Chicago, Miss Ellis, T. B. King of New York, A. R. Foley, C. T. Broderick of Boston, E. T. Trumbull and Miss McBright.

It is said two of the Lusitania survivors are aboard the New York.

LEAGUE DEMANDS ADEQUATE NAVY

NEW YORK, May 15.—The defence of our country will be by guns and not by tongues. We don't want an unarmed war, but an armed peace.—General Horace Porter.

The cheapest navy that can be built is a navy made equal to defeat a foe. Money spent in any other way is money thrown away.—Admiral Fletcher.

If we are to sow the seed of international brotherhood we must first be armed to the teeth in our hands and our rifles by our sides. We must have a navy adequate to fulfil its duty to the country and to the world.—The Rev. Lyman Abbott.

The people can't say what our navy shall consist of. It can bring direct pressure on Congress for an adequate navy.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Every one knows that New York is practically defenseless. It is at the mercy of any fleet that can overpower our coast attack.—Colonel Robert M. Thompson.

More than five hundred persons at the banquet given to the officers of the Atlantic fleet by the Navy League in the Ansonia Hotel heard Admiral Fletcher declare that the navy needs more ships, listened to the Rev. Lyman Abbott declare that he no longer believed universal peace possible in the near future, and applauded Frank. D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, who urged the people to appeal direct to Congress and trust to the judgement of the naval men to say just what kind of a navy the United States should have.

"IT IS HUMILIATING

"It is humiliating to look at our navy today," said General Horace Porter, in introducing the toastmaster.

General Horace Porter, president of the league, presided, and Colonel Robert M. Thompson was toastmaster. Officers in the full dress uniform of the service mingled about the big room, interspersed with women in handsome gowns, while the Stars and Stripes and naval flags adorned every space available. It was a colorful affair, and the toasts to the President, to the army and to the navy were drunk amid prolonged cheers.

"It is humiliating to look at our navy today," said General Horace Porter, in introducing the toastmaster.

GUARANTEE FOR PEACE.

"We must have more ships and more men. The only thing of superabundance in the navy is water, and if it were possible I suppose some cheese-paring politician would cut that in half. Treaties can't have been made have failed as soon as the leaders backs were turned.

"The navy is the greatest guarantee, the greatest surety for peace.

"We don't gain land by calling out. When we come out of an international conflict it must be with no dust on our knees."

In replying among other remarks Colonel Robert M. Thompson said we must have a navy that could welcome with open arms to a hospitable grave any foe that dare attack us. He said:

"Let us not be another China. Let us, no matter what the cost, put ourselves in a position to maintain our self-respect and the respect of the rest of the world."

MEXICANS KILL 3 AMERICANS

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Except by the land commissioner granted to American outlaws in the Rio Grande Valley of Mexico the Yaqui Indians are now engaged in a pitched battle instead of wiping out the foreign element in their territory.

A delayed cable dispatch from Admiral Howard, commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet, brought this information to the Navy Department today.

Admiral Howard confirmed the report to the death of J. J. Dunean and Jack Wilson, who were killed the day the fighting commenced. The following day, May 12, W. A. Vanderhoef, U. S. consul at Guaymas, dispatch also confirmed the report that R. F. Brooker of Alamia had been seriously wounded.

Immediately upon the receipt of the dispatch it was forwarded to the Department. Officials said that no reactions or blockade would be needed from American ships as no one is threatened with danger unless the State interference or either party.

CRUISERS AT GUAYMAS.

The cruiser New Orleans will reach Guaymas, Mexico, second port in the west coast fighting today. The cruiser Raleigh is now there. Admiral Benson, acting secretary of the navy, ordered Admiral Howard to keep the Navy Department informed of every development in the situation.

Mrs. Belmont Is Ready to Fight in Case of War

NEW YORK, May 15.—Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont is ready to head a company of women to fight the invaders. Her criticism of the note is that it should have been sent months ago.

"Why did it take the sinking of the Lusitania to make this government assert itself?" she asked. "That is not half so terrible as some of the things Germany has done. Why is the killing of some Americans citizens any worse for us than the slaughter of thousands of innocent Belgians?

"The United States is snobbish—snobbish and commercial. I don't object to dollars and cents. Most of us need it to keep food in our mouths and clothes on our backs. But the government should be above it."

ACCUSE DEAD MAN IN MILLION SUIT

NEW YORK, May 15.—Reports on the part of Mrs. Cora Langdon Van Nest Smith, Mrs. Jeanette Sanderson Van Nest, executrix of the estate of Augustus Van Nest, and Nathan Bouton, counsel for the trust company of New York, executor of the estate of Warner M. Van Norden, which amount they say, has been squandered, are to result in serious charges against Warner M. Van Norden, it is said, in his answer against his dead brother.

The allegations against Warner M. Van Norden in the suit now on are the most serious yet made in the Nineteenth Ward Bank, he indulged in speculations to the amount of more than $1,000,000 and that in order to cover up his acts he gave out false statements, by misrepresentations to the directors, that the funds were safe. It is charged that his father-in-law, Augustus Van Nest, gave him money, believing it was to be used in the bank, and that Warner M. Van Norden, knowing he was insolvent, deliberately turned over to his brother-in-law a number of notes on which the estate is brought suit. Mrs. Van Nest, executrix, is asking judgment for $1,000,000 against Warner M. Van Norden, and for $500,000 against the bondsmen of the defendant without consideration, the son acting in collusion with counter claim against the estate of Augustus Van Nest, executrix, in turn is charged by the brother and sister.

ROOSEVELT IS DROPPED BY GERMAN LEAGUE

NEW YORK, May 15.—The New Yorker Staats Zeitung announces that Colonel Roosevelt has been dropped from membership from the roll of the League of the German Societies and of the general German Alliance.

The cause of Theodore Roosevelt's dropping from the membership lists of the Veterinarians After Dentz, whose Association one of the Allegheny Societies belonged. Both leagues have dropped Teddy abruptly and totally from their lists, in consequence of his attack on the submarine murder. The Old German Soldiers' League and Roosevelt some time ago without any ceremony. The occasion for this procedure was the attack on the fifth anniversary of the sinking of the Lusitania. On both occasions it was not considered worth while to discuss the matter, but it was found appropriate to drop him smoothly and without much ado."

ROOSEVELT FUR TO FLY MONDAY

By L. V. B. RUCKER.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 15.—The fur will surely fly on Monday when the Barnes-Roosevelt $50,000 libel suit enters into its fifth and last week.

The Barnes side has subpoenaed twenty-eight additional witnesses who will take the stand after Barnes to bolster his actions against the Roosevelt charge that he combined with Charles F. Murphy in the 1911 senatorial contest.

Colonel Roosevelt is in New York. The Colonel refused to say for publication why he was going to New York, but it is inconceivable that he will not consult his voluminous files at Sagamore Hill, Oyster Bay, to obtain material if possible with which excoriatingly to confuse Barnes and one or two other witnesses for the plaintiff.

On sur-rebuttal the Colonel hopes to be able to refute the testimony disputing that of William Loeb and the evidence about Roosevelt's alleged utterances at the Harvard Club, in which the witness Hutchison said Roosevelt said he was the only man who could tear Woodrow Wilson to pieces; that there was no one in the Republican party who could do it, but that no party was big enough to contain him and Barnes.

William M. Ivins today said that the additional witnesses for the plaintiff might run up to thirty or forty.

Roosevelt for his justification of the alleged libel of Barnes in his statement of July 22, 1914, that Barnes, staunch advocate of party organization and boss rule, was in a corrupt alliance with Murphy and Tammany Hall and in a corrupt-business-corrupt-politics alliance, now rests on the 1911 senatorial election and the alleged corporation contributions to both parties.

All of his sur-rebuttal testimony will be directed to those two points.

The additional witnesses for Barnes are all members and ex-members of the Assembly and Senate who participated in the 1911 session that turned down William F. Sheehan and sent James A. O'Gorman to the United States Senate to succeed Chauncey M. Depew.

New Radcliffe Fire Captain to Teach Girls Slide for Life

The job of making the Radcliffe girls slide down a rope fire escape has fallen upon the shoulders of Hester Brown, '16, of Cambridge, who has been elected fire captain, in place of Marjorie Bridgman.

The fire captain has to see that proper discipline is maintained among the student body; that egress from the building is unhampered; that everything is O. K.

The hardest part of the job is to get the girls to take the test prescribed by the college, which consists of sliding down a thirty-foot rope ladder used as a fire escape. Last Fall Marjorie Bridgman had a hard time in getting the girls to take the slide for life.

Mrs. Lippitt's Home Invaded by Tramp

A tramp was an uninvited guest at Beverly Farms at the Summer home of Mrs. Henry F. Lippitt, formerly of Pittsburgh, and sister-in-law of former President Taft. When he departed after sleeping in one of the guest chambers, he left behind his undergarments, size 46, and took with him clean linen, which was in a bureau drawer.

Brookline Hunt for 'Lost' Lad in Tunnel

The police and members of the Brookline engineering and sewer departments had an unsuccessful search for a youth supposed to have dropped through a manhole of the "Snow brook." The hole into which the youth is supposed to have dropped empties into a huge tunnel through which boys have walked as a pastime. It is believed the "lost" youth did this.

The senior class of Posse Normal School of Gymnastics today held their final session of commencement week exercises in the school gymnasium. More than twenty-five members were presented with diplomas by the Baroness Rose Posse.

The large gymnasium presented a pretty spectacle, decorated with bunting and flowers. The seniors marched in following their president, George H. Chamberlain.

The program was as follows: Salutatory, Mary Gavin; class history, Adelaide F. Hussy; oration, Ruth E. Williams; class will, J. Austin Pierce; class prophecy, Mary F. Butler, Helen S. Foss, Flo E. Jacobs, I. Lucille Washburn, Ruby E. Dickinson, Price Thesis, Thomas D. Shepard; valedictory, Roland C. Massie; presentation of class gift, George S. Chamberlain; address, George I. Aldrich, superintendent of Brookline schools; presentation of diplomas, Baroness Rose Posse.

WOMAN GONE LIKE DOROTHY ARNOLD

NEW YORK, May 15.—The mysterious disappearance of Miss Emily M. Murphy, thirty-five, said to be wealthy, from her home in Brooklyn, more than two months ago has been just reported to the police.

Relatives have concealed the mystery from the police and newspapers and the circumstances in some ways are similar to those of the dropping out of sight of Dorothy Arnold. Miss Murphy lived alone in a three room apartment. She was an active charity worker and was known to have large deposits in Brooklyn banks, which remain in tact.

The long period which has elapsed since she vanished has greatly handicapped the police. Relatives are loath to talk of her life.

A neighbor said she left her home to visit a priest in Newark. Bishop J. J. O'Connor of South Orange, in charge of the Newark diocese, questioned all the priests but none remember a woman answering Miss Murphy's description.

The woman was unknown to anybody in the fashionable neighborhood where she resided and nothing can be learned of her history.

She moved into the suite in the apartments eleven months ago. She never had any visitors so far as her immediate neighbors know and was always seen coming and going alone.

When Miss Murphy disappeared she wore an expensive black hat with a pink feather, a blue serge gown and pearl gray kid shoes. She is five feet seven inches tall weighs 125 pounds and has fair hair and blue eyes.

Crowley Denies Gang Charge of Slayer

Superintendent Crowley and members of the Boston police department deny the statement of Peter Krakus, hanged for murder in Wilmington, Del., that Boston and New York policemen profited by the outlaws of a gang of thugs. Krakus declared on the scaffold that he was a member of a gang to which New York and Boston policemen belonged.

SEEK NEW PLAN TO BALK THAW

NEW YORK, May 15.—The Attorney-General's staff will go into conference today in an attempt to discover some new way to try to block the decision of Justice Hendrick to call in a jury to help him determine the sanity of Harry K. Thaw. Friends of Thaw, who are jubilant over the action of the appellate division in throwing out the Attorney-General's writ of prohibition to restrain Justice Hendrick, declare that the case will be presented to the jury Monday.

The appellate division decision is the second victory for Thaw in his fight to put the question of his sanity up to a jury. His attorneys, including John B. Stanchfield and Abel I. Smith, won their first move when they obtained the jury trial order from Justice Hendrick. The latter, in passing upon the point, said that he would bring the case before a jury in order to have the advice of such a body in determining the question of Thaw's sanity.

The objection of the Attorney-General's office to Justice Hendrick's decision was mainly that he, the justice, alone was empowered to pass upon the question and that he had acted outside his jurisdiction in sending the question of fact to a jury. Against this contention Mr. Stanchfield argued that the law was clear that the whole procedure lay within the discretion of the justice.

Phone Company Quotes Law Upon Hours for Girls

Questions of extraordinary emergency and extraordinary public requirement are raised by the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company, in its answer to the State Commission of Labor and Industry, on the charge it violates the labor laws in some exchanges.

The company takes exceptions to the commission's findings that an operator working from 6 p. m. until midnight, then retiring to rest in a room furnished by the company, and being subject to call, was on duty and therefore at work.

Weds 1 of 12 Named in ex-Hubby's Suit

BALTIMORE, May 15.—After the experience of trying one situation by which her husband, Joseph R. Stonebraker, during divorce proceedings prayed a New York court to forbid twelve named men from paying attention to her, Mrs. Constance Stilwell Stonebraker has again leaped into the limelight by marrying one of the twelve, Frederick Alfred Cornelius, of New York, according to word received here.

Man, 60, Evades His Guardian and Weds

BUTLER, Mo., May 15.—Evading his guardian, Henry C. Smith of Appleton City, seventy-six, one of the wealthiest men of St. Clair County, came to Butler with Mrs. Theresa A. Hammett, fifty-five, to whom he was married, at the Cottage Hotel. The pair got Recorder Fortune out of bed to obtain the license.

Fish Barks Like a Dog.

JOLIET, Ill., May 15.—A huge fish with a beak like a bird and which barked like a dog when it attacked a rowboat, fought a twenty-minute battle with Arthur A. Lennon.

COULD INTERN 7 GERMAN VESSELS

Charles Kuhlewein, Boston agent for the North German Lloyd steamship line, declared today that, in event of hostilities between the United States and Germany, the German merchant vessels now in American ports would merely be interned during the war, according to international law, but not seized by the United States.

There are seven German steamers and one Austrian merchant steamer in Boston harbor now. They are not interned. They are laid up here. The most notable one is the North German Lloyd liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie, which ran down from Bar Harbor for better harborage.

Agent Kuhlewein said: "According to international law, the German ships now laid up in American ports would be perfectly safe in the event of hostilities between this country and Germany. They would be interned until the end of the war, when they would be returned to their owners. The crews, in the meantime, would be interned in concentration camps or elsewhere.

"Mark that I say, 'according to international law.' This was what was done with German ships in French ports and French ships in German ports in 1870, and is, I believe, the common usage.

"But now there seems to be no such thing as international law. I have just heard that the English have held prize court proceedings and sold the Hamburg-American liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie, which was caught in a British port at the outbreak of the war."

This refers to another vessel of the same name as the North German Lloyd liner laid up at Boston.

It is estimated that 35,000 tons of coal would be required for the seven German steamers here, were they to leave, to say nothing of food supplied. So far as customs and other port officials know, there have been no preparations at coaling or victualling. All have only skeleton crews, except the Ochenfels, which has had to retain its full Lascar crew.

When it was reported several weeks ago that the Kronprinzessin Cecilie was planning to steal out with supplies to the German sea-raider Karlsruhe, Captain Polack of the liner said: "Perfectly ridiculous," and called attention to the coaling alone that would have to be done.

Lawyer in Skirts Demonstrates Acts of Woman in Car

Pitt F. Drew, an attorney for the Middlesex & Boston Street Railway Company, garbed in female clothing, attempted to demonstrate how a woman would arrange her skirt when seated in a street car, before Judge White and a jury in the Superior Court.

Mrs. Mary D'Arcy of Roxbury is suing the company for $1,000, claiming that her imported silk gown was ruined by an electric car heater and her lower limbs burned.

Drew, dressed in the gown, tried to show the jury that a woman sitting down in a street car would arrange her skirt so that it could not take fire from a heater.

Woman to Climb Icy Peak.

NEW YORK, May 15.—Miss Mary L. Jobe, a noted woman mountain climber and explorer, has announced the completion of her plans for a second expedition to the new ice mountain in the Northern Canadian Rockies.

Prowler Escapes Chase by Citizens in Somerville

A prowler who had climbed the piazza of the house at No. 172 Powder House boulevard, West Somerville, discovered peering in the windows of the apartments of Richard E. Hildreth by Miss Cameron, daughter of George B. Cameron, who lives next door. The man was chased through the streets, but escaped.

About the same time the police received a report that an attempt had been made to enter the home of William E. Brown at No. 62 Curtis street.

URGE SEIZURE OF GERMAN PROPERTY

By JOHN C. FOSTER.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

LONDON, May 15.—A demand for the confiscation of all German-owned property in Great Britain, valued at a total of more than a billion of dollars, was made here today by influential newspapers.

The proposition has the support of Lord Beresford, a member of Parliament. While the work of interning Germans and Austrians was in progress today, outbursts of anti-German rioting occurred in many quarters, and scores of arrests were made.

In South London, barber shops, meat markets, bakeries, saloons, grocery stores and jewelry shops were attacked. In Tottenham, a mob fought with the police and a dozen arrests were made. The German proprietor of a jewelry shop complained that the rioters had looted his place, carrying off most of his stock.

Appeals from German-Americans to the American embassy for protection were frequent.

GERMANS PROMINENT.

"Public clamor for "one treatment" for all Germans has put a perplexing problem up to the government. Some of the members of the government are Germans. Two of them, Sir Edward Speyer and Sir Edward Cassell, are bankers and members of the Privy Council. Both are multi-millionaires and friends of King George.

Elmer Chickering, Noted Photographer, Dies in Hospital

Elmer Chickering, for years one of the leading photographers of Boston, is dead at a local hospital after a short illness. He was sixty-five.

He was born in Brandon, Vt. When sixteen he went to work for Reuben Daniels, the inventor of farm machinery, and took charge of seven farms.

Three years later he came to Boston and opened a studio in West street on what is now the site of the present studio. His business increased rapidly, and soon he was photographing the most widely known men. Among his subjects were President McKinley and Thomas B. Reed. For years he made a majority of the pictures of the men of the Legislature and the Justices of the Supreme Court.

Son of Earl of Galloway Slain

LONDON, May 15.—A British casualty list issued today contains the names of 200 officers, many of them members of famous families. Among the dead are: Lieutenant W. F. Rodney, of the Flying Corps, a brother of Lord Rodney; Lord Spencer Douglas Compton, captain of the Horse Guards and heir to the Marquis of Northampton; Lieutenant Keith Anthony Stewart of the Black Watch, son of the Earl of Galloway, and Captain Enig Upton, captain of the Royal Rifles, son-in-law of Viscount Templeton.

Doctor Rushed to Patient by Air Route

MARSHALLTOWN, Ia., May 15.—After speeding eleven miles through the air at the rate of 110 miles an hour in answer to an emergency call, Dr. Pearl E. Somers bound up a patient's wound sooner than an automobile would have been ready to start. He made the trip with W. C. Robinson, aviator.

SHOWS INJUSTICE OF FILM REFORM

Fred Murphy, manager of the United Film Service, with headquarters in Boston, today struck the keynote of the film censorship agitation when he declared:

"Compelling producers to submit their films to censorship before they have been displayed and judged by the public would be a distinct hardship and injustice.

"It would be about as fair and sane to compel the publisher of a magazine or newspaper to produce his copy or proofs for censorship before publications are printed.

"That is the vital feature of the whole controversy. In my opinion if certain so-called reformers had their way the press would be bridled. What difference is there in attempting to strangle the freedom of the film?

"All films are illustrated manuscripts. They picture written episodes. Therefore to suppress them in a high-handed manner and in a spirit of fancied injury would be cruel.

"These narratives are printed serially in the newspapers. Illegal injunctions or restrictions of photoplays would, therefore, strike at the freedom of the press. That is what the citizens should guard against. That is what legislators should keep in mind.

"CENSORED ENOUGH."

"When you permit a single encroachment, no matter how apparently trivial at the start, you jeopardize one of the most sacred institutions in this great nation—a free press—which is as necessary as free speech.

"What do you suppose would happen to the film industry if emotional men and women were permitted to follow their impulses? How many really gripping and instructive subjects do you suppose would find their way to the public screens?

"I don't wish to be harsh with persons who I believe are sincere in most cases, even if misguided. The trouble is that every community has men and women with so much spare time on their hands that they don't know what to do. They take up such an agitation of this and make a hobby of it.

"They plunge in and try to carry their point, blinded by their enthusiasm and depending mostly on hearsay. Too often they don't take the trouble properly to study conditions before they assert themselves or drive home their claims.

"They don't consider the interests involved. They may think themselves philanthropists, but the spirit of fair play never enters their heads. They don't try to put themselves in the position of the opposition. They just blindly shout. Such persons are more of a menace than a help in any controversy, but they don't realize it.

"We picture men contend that films are sufficiently censored and the public adequately protected by the National Board of Censorship. We feel that if a film is objected to by a certain number of reputable citizens it ought to be given a hearing, but we don't think a group of self-appointed judges should stand between the liberal-minded public and the film industry and cripple it.

"DANGEROUS PRECEDENTS."

"If the plan of the antis were to be adopted films costing thousands of dollars and involving a great deal of time, films perfectly proper, mind you, would be in danger of being blacklisted because of the whims or stilted views of men and women who consider that they are fitted to certify what the general public should see.

"Such a scheme would establish dangerous precedents. It would permit the evil influence of political and personal prejudices. The one thing we motion picture fellows seek to avoid is individual standards and judgments."

The Senate yesterday passed to a third reading the compromise measure railroaded by the House, providing that the chief Justice of the Boston Municipal Court shall be empowered to name the Mayor and police commissioner. This bill will probably be taken up on Monday for engrossment.

SUNDAY TALKS TO CROWD OF WOMEN

PATERSON, N. J., May 15.—Twenty thousand women fought for places in the tabernacle to hear "Billy" Sunday's sermon on the duties of women. The women ushers and nurses were unable to handle the immense press. Extra details of police and firemen were called on to assist, and had but little more effect than the official ushers.

The gathering was made up of working girls, housewives and society women, who arrived in automobiles. They filled the seats in the auditorium and then jammed the aisles full. Several fainted in the crush, and the police and firemen were hard pressed to carry these to the tabernacle hospital through the dense packed congregation.

When the sermon started Sunday was the only man in the building. He cast aside convention and hurled out his denunciation in plain, every-day talk. He said:

"You know there are homes in which the advent of one, two or possibly three children is considered a curse instead of a blessing. God, in his providence, has denied the honor of maternity to some women. But there are married women who shrink from maternity, not because of ill health, but simply because they love ease, because they love fine garments and ability to flirt like a butterfly at some social function.

"I am sure there is not an angel in heaven who would not be glad to come to earth and be honored with motherhood if God would grant them that privilege.

"Society has just about put maternity out of fashion. When you stop to consider the average society woman I do not think maternity has lost anything. The humbler children are raised by their mothers instead of being turned over to a governess.

"There are too many girls who marry for other causes than love. I think ambition, indulgence and laziness lende more girls to the altar than love. Girls are not actuated by love, but are simply willing to pay the price of wifehood to wear fine clothes. They are not moved by the noble desires of womanhood."

CHURCH NOTES OF GREATER BOSTON

DOUBLE RACE CARD FOR THE BIKE FANS

CARD OF RACES.

25-mile motor-paced—Elmer Collins, Lynn, vs. Bobby Walthour, Atlanta, vs. Leon Didier, France.

Match motor-paced race—five-mile heats—Harold Rollins, Everett, vs. Vincenzo Madonna, Providence.

Amateur and professional races.

The regular bike season opens at the Revere cycle track tonight, when some of the best riders in the country will clash in a series of races, including a double motor-paced bill of fare and an attractive list of amateur and professional events.

The big contest of "the night, a twenty-five mile race behind the motors, brings together Elmer Collins of Lynn, Bobby Walthour of Atlanta and Leon Didier of France.

Unusual interest is being manifested in the showing of Collins, who is picked by many to win the event.

Lynn will be well represented at the race, as a large delegation of "fans" from the Shoe City will be sent to cheer their favorite, Elmer Collins, in his big "come back" attempt.

The second half of the motor-paced bill will be a match heat race between Harold Rollins, Everett boy, and Vincenzo Madonna of Providence. This event is listed in the second class—a class inaugurated for the development of new pace followers.

Many new faces will be seen in the amateur and professional events, which promise to furnish some close competition.

PARADE TO OPEN CATHOLIC LEAGUE

GAMES TODAY.

St. Mark's vs. St. Paul's Shirley street.

St. Ambrose vs. St. Peter's Town Field.

St. William's vs. St. Ann's Neponset.

St. Stephen's vs. St. Margaret's, Locust street.

Drawing to a minister street parade, line up of hundreds of automobiles, the Dorchester Catholic League will usher in its baseball season today.

The headquarters of the league, at Fields Corner, will be the official starting point of the parade. Here the multitude of vehicles will assemble. The first auto is to carry prominent clergy, and it is expected that Cardinal O'Connell will be on hand to lead the procession in the morning.

The ball players of each team will assemble at their parishes. The parade will pass through the principal streets of Dorchester and return to the clubhouse.

Then the players will be driven to Dorchester ball park and the season will be on.

Brookfeds Release Six to New Farm

The Brooklyn Federal League team has released six players to the Colonial League, the New England minor, organized to act as a farm for the parent.

Only three of the players are men of prominence. Those are Jim Delehanty, the Yankee infielder, who goes to Fall River, and Burt Maxwell and Byron Houck, who are to play with New Haven.

Maxwell will manage the New Haven team.

Harvard and Yale Crews in Races Today

The champion class crews of Harvard and Yale, both manned by sophomores, will meet this afternoon on the Charles for the class crew championship of the two Universities. The race, which will be over the 1½ mile course, will start from Cottage Farm Bridge at 4.30 o'clock, rain or shine permitting, and finish at a point off the Union Boat Club house. Preceding this race Messrs. N. E. Darling and R. Carpenter, Harvard oarsmen, and G. Burton and S. Gallard, both of Yale, will race to determine the single sculling championship.

Provisions have been completed whereby the advantages of the positions of the crew at every quarter of a mile will be flashed to the Harvard bridge, and also the name of the winning crew and single sculler.

The class crews will be rowed in:

Harvard—Stroke, J. C. White; 7, A. Potter; 6, R. G. Lovell; 5, W. Richardson; 4, Coolidge; 3, W. C. Webber; 2, L. K. T. Phillips; bow, F. A. Ingersoll, coxswain, C. L. Hendrickson.

Yale—Stroke, H. Hume; bow, S. Walker; 7, Kee Wood; 6, G. Orton; 5, R. Bartlett; 4, R. Walker; 3, P. Bell; 2, J. Koehne; coxswain, C. Hennessey.

The ball players of each team will assemble at their clubs. The parade will pass through the principal streets of Dorchester and return to the clubhouse.

Then the players will be driven to Dorchester ball park and the season will be on.

Charley Scott Now with the Lynn Team

Charley Scott, the pitcher loaned South by the Red Sox and later released to Providence, has been signed by the latter club to the Lynn team of the New England League. Scott has the makings of a good pitcher and should win many ball games for Manager Louis Pieper.

Jeffries Passes Crisis.

LOS ANGELES, May 15.—James J. Jeffries, former heavyweight champion of the world, who has been ill of pneumonia for the last four days, was said to be past the crisis of the illness.

Coast May Lose the A.A.U. Championship

NEW YORK, May 15.—There is a chance that the National track and field championships of the Amateur Athletic Union may not be decided at San Francisco as scheduled. It was the understanding when the championships were awarded to the Panama-Pacific Exposition that a money guarantee would be forthcoming. Since then nothing has been heard from the coast and it is understood that if a substantial offer is not made for the fixture at the meeting on May 29 of the committee in charge the place for holding the championships will be changed to some city more accessible to the athletes of the country.

JOE WOOD MAY FACE THE TIGERS

DETROIT, May 15.—After a day of rest the Boston Red Sox and Detroit Tigers will engage in the final game of their series here today. Manager Jennings announced that he would send Dubuc in to try and capture the farewell game. Either Joe Wood or Ray Collins will be the selection of Manager Carrigan for the Boston team.

Immediately after the contest today the Red Sox start for Cleveland, where they open a series with the ex-Naps. Their showing here has been of the very best, winning two out of three games. Should they capture the final tussle, the Indians will start slumping, as the Red Sox will have done something really remarkable, considering the way the Tigers have been cleaning up.

Roush Refuses to Sign Long Contract

Ed Roush, of the Newark Feds, who is regarded by Bill Phillips as being a better man than Benny Kauff, refused to be tied down to a three-year contract with Pat Powers' club. It was learned that Powers made a good offer to the youthful player to sign for three years, but the offer was turned down, Roush preferring to take his chances on making good this year and demanding a big increase before he agrees to play with the Newark club next season.

Roush's case is similar to that of Kauff. Roush had an agreement with the Newark club to play for $4,000 a year, but he was not signed to a contract until a few days ago. He then signed for one year.

Corbett Protege Wins Bout in Australia

James J. Corbett writes from Australia that the heavyweight, Tom Cowler, whom he put under contract on the Coast and took to the Antipodes, made a fine debut at Sydney on April 11. Cowler met Les O'Donnell, one of the best big fellows Australia boasts, and beat him so severely that the bout was stopped in the sixth round.

Former Bates Star Released by Troy

TROY, N. Y., May 15.—Manager Wachter of the Troy baseball team has announced the release of Outfielder Hall, who was sold to the Philadelphia Nationals, and Infielder Crowthers, former Bates College star.

"The Rabbit's" Column

By Walter J. Maranville

HOPSTOP OF THE BRAVES

Listen to what Connie Mack has been telling St. Louis reporters:

"I know you're going to laugh when I tell you I would not trade Lajoie for Collins, but don't. At least I won't.

"I mean every word of this statement. I wouldn't trade Lajoie for Collins. Understand, I'm not saying that for effect, because it would have no effect on Larry. It's merely my opinion on the matter.

"My team doesn't miss Collins. No, Baker is the only player we miss. Kopf is a nice player since he recovered from his injury, but Kopf isn't a Baker, and that's why I'm looking for a Baker."

* * *

Bunny Brief, the new first baseman for the White Sox, was unmasked before he played his first major league game. His name is not Brief, according to a friend from his home town, Traverse City, but it Tony Gretkowski—as near as it can be spelled in the American lingo. The "Brief" story is rather interesting. When one of Bunny's brothers went to work in a Traverse City factory, a few years ago, he sprung the Gretkowski stuff on an unsuspecting employer. The employer commented, "Too much," and turning to the timekeeper, said, "Make it brief." And it has been Brief since that day. All the youngsters in the family fell into line and accepted the new monicker.

Brief is known as "Chi" by many of his friends at Traverse City. As a kid he used to say that some day he would play ball for Chicago when he grew up. Hence that nickname.

Brief seems to be quite a valuable addition to the "hitless wonders." He is the lad who, while playing with Kansas City last year, got a bit each day for thirty consecutive days. In that month he hit safely forty-six times, and scored twenty-five runs.

The bulletin issued by President John K. Tener to his umpires, in which he orders the field umpire to always look at the player holding the ball when the "hidden ball trick" is to be tried, does not please some of the players. They believe that with two coachers and practically every member of the team at bat keeping their eye on the ball, it is not necessary for an umpire to look right at the man trying to "hide the ball."

"Tener may say 'the hidden ball trick is unpopular as like,' said a veteran player, "but just the same the fans enjoy it when it works, and with umpires instructed to look directly at the player who hides the ball, to my mind it is tipping off the man on whom the play is to be tried."

Once more Sheldon Lejeune has failed to be the big show and been sent to the minors—this time by the Pirates. This means, in all probability, that he has had his last chance in fast company. Lejeune is getting along in years—that is, as too count years in base ball—though he would still be counted as a boy in any other walk of business life. Queer thing about this Lejeune, the strong-armed thrower in the game—he is ever a king among the minors, and one of their best batsmen, but he doesn't seem capable when he gets up in the highest circles.

Other men from his minor league, unable to but nearly as heavily against the lesser pitchers, are very likely to outlast him in the big leagues, but the star of the whole lot, when on his own stamping grounds, can not make good. There are many similar cases, the most noted, perhaps, being Frank Huelsman and Emil Frisk.

* * *

How widespread is the effect of the present era of baseball retrenchment, due to losses of the year gone and increased operating expenses of the present one, is shown in a report from the Pacific Coast on the work of the knife in the Double A league there located. More than fifty players, at least half of whom are known on one or other of the major circuits, have been cast adrift. Some have caught on in lower leagues—thus forcing out other ball players of less reputation—while a number are still looking for berths or have decided to take up employment other than baseball.

In the final summing up the present trouble finally affects the player most of all.

* * *

When if comes to superstition, Eddie Collins has almost of his fellow players beaten by several city blocks, and long ones at that, according to an article I read the other day.

They say Collins pulls the stuff right on the ball field before all the people, but not many of them see it. For instance, if you watch you see him always pick up the bat at the end of the row which lies in front of the bench. Eddie must have his bat on the end and no other one on the club does to touch that bat.

If two bats in the pile happen to get crossed Eddie will instantly straighten them out. If he doesn't see the thing in time, some fellow on the other side is almost sure to make a three-base hit.

After one of the enemy is retired and the ball is whipped around the infield it always must be returned to him before tossed back to the pitcher. If Eddie doesn't give the ball to the pitcher the enemy is liable to bat in six runs.

* * *

When Collins starts to dress for the game he removes his shirt first but first and immediately puts on his baseball cap. Failure to do so would bring him what he calls any hits that day.

If he goes three times and doesn't get a hit he fouches each one of the players on the bench with his bat before going up the fourth time. He did that in Chicago the other day and got a triple.

When he goes to bat he takes his chewing gum out of his mouth and sticks it on the button of his cap. When two strikes are called on him he removes the gum from his cap to his mouth, otherwise he would fan.

* * *

In dressing in his street clothes after the game he always ties each shoe and does on all his things, including collar, tie, hat and coat before he puts on his trousers. Failure to observe this rule would mean loss of the game the next day.

Eddie studied his psychology at Columbia University before he thought of being a ball player. Yet there are many who think he learned the national game under Connie Mack.

HARVARD PICKED TO DEFEAT YALE

NEW HAVEN, May 15.—Yale and Harvard today had cloudless skies, a fast track and the biggest crowd that ever assembled here for a dual track meet. It was the twenty-fourth between the old rivals, the first being in 1892.

Today's meet, if won by Yale, will give the Elis permanent possession of the cup offered to the university which first wins it five times.

The Yale track athletic management announced this morning that Bill Roos would compete in the shot put, in which his record is four feet better than his nearest rival. Harvard, which has no weight hurlers in Roos' class in ability, will probably file a protest if Roos is used by Yale. His case may lead to a complete revision of the rules for the Yale-Harvard cup.

In several cases athletes have been used by Yale whose cases closely resemble that of Roos. Another conference was called for this noon in the hope of securing harmony between the two universities over the athlete. Unless Roos competes Yale will enter the meet with chances slightly favoring Harvard. Betting, however, remained at even terms all the morning. This will probably be the last meet under the present rules, and Harvard will insist on a new set of eligibility rules.

Reports have been received here that Eddie Teschner, the crack Harvard sprinter, is in poor physical condition. He was counted upon as certain to take first in the 100 and the 220-yard dash. Most of the betting has clustered around the outcome of the quarter-mile and the two-mile run. Whether Wilkie of Yale can defeat Willcox of Harvard is a question on which Yale men have plunged heavily. Yale men are equally confident that Johnny Overton would capture the two-mile race. The hurdles are the most uncertain events of the meet. President Lill of the A. A. U. has accepted an invitation as referee.

Cornell, Princeton and Yale Crews Race

PRINCETON, May 15.—Cornell, Yale and Princeton clash in a triangular crew race at Lake Carnegie this afternoon. Cornell is picked by many to win, but the race should be one of the closest rowed in years.

Cornell will have the west course, Princeton the middle lane and Yale on the canal bank. All three crews have had workouts over the lake course and are in the best of condition.

Withington Not to Row in the Henley Regatta

The Union Boat Club's first eight must row without the services of its captain, Dr. Paul Withington, when competing in the Henley regatta on the Schuylkill River next Saturday. The stewards in charge of the Philadelphia races have requested the Union Boat Club management not to enter Dr. Withington's name as a competitor, and the Boston club has agreed not to.

Dr. Withington, aside from being captain of the eight, is a fine single sculler and was entered in the sculling events at the Henley.

What led to the Henley committee's action is not generally known, but it is the belief that Dr. Withington's activities as assistant graduate treasurer of the Harvard Athletic Association with its attendant duties as head of Freshman athletics, and Varsity and Freshman football coach may have had something to do with their decision.

Withington coaches at Harvard, it is said, without remuneration, but the fact that he receives a salary for his services in the athletic offices may have influenced the Philadelphia committee, who determined to be "safe rather than sorry," hence the note to the Union Boat Club management.

NEW YORK, May 15.—Al Mattern, the former pitcher with the Boston Nationals, has signed a contract with the Cincinnati Reds and has reported to Manager Herzog.

Knockouts I Have Seen By Ed. W. Smith

This is the fifth of a series of articles by Ed Smith, the famous boxing expert and well known referee.

The alibi that the fighter has for a defeat, or in fact for anything that may happen to him in the ring, is sometimes about as funny as could be devised by a real comedian. It is mighty seldom that the boxer, especially the minor boy, is beaten on the level. Something always happens to outluck him out of the decision.

And this business of the alibi isn't always confined to the minor boys either.

Joe Galligan lost a fight on a foul one night about twenty years ago at the Chicago Athletic Association and afterwards gave a comedy excuse for his actions that was a scream.

Joe was boxing Dick Hart, another local lightweight, and George Siler was referee of the bout. Joe was a notoriously hard hitter, but many questioned his courage, though I always considered that he was as game as the next one.

HIT BOXER WHILE DOWN.

The pair went along nicely for three rounds, but after that Hart weakened and Galligan began to get to him. A solid swat in the jaw upset Dick in the fourth round and he took the full count. He got up again only to be sent to the floor heavily. Again this was repeated and a fourth time.

As Hart was taking the count and Siler had reached "six," the fallen man prepared to get to his feet once more. Siler had held Galligan off, but as Joe saw Hart was getting up, he ran around the referee and while Hart was still on one knee he swung an uppercut at him, hit him in the jaw and knocked him flat again.

Siler promptly disqualified Galligan and gave the battle to Hart on the all too apparent foul.

It was such a deliberate thing that Siler got curious and before Galligan left the ring he walked over to his corner and said:

"Joe, you had that boy licked. What ever did you want to foul him for?"

"Well," retorted Joe angrily, "what did he want to get up for?"

And while on the subject of fouls we'll tell a little story of a certain Western referee, whose name shall not be mentioned because he is still in the business and it might be embarrassing to him.

He was acting as third man when Jim Flynn and Tony Ross, heavyweights, were boxing one night in the former's home town of Pueblo, Col. It was a dandy battle during the early stages, going first one way and then another, the final result always appearing mighty uncertain.

REFEREE SPRINGS NEW ONE.

Along in the sixteenth or seventeenth round Flynn began to get the big shade, and in the eighteenth Ross fouled him palpably by hitting low. The referee promptly stopped the battle and gave the decision to Flynn.

This was entirely satisfactory to the home crowd, which was tooting wildly for Flynn to win, although many of the spectators didn't see the punch that ended the battle. One of the newspapermen jumped into the ring at the conclusion and said to the referee:

"I didn't see the punch. Was it a foul?"

"Sure it was," said the ref. "He hit him square in the solar plexus."

The critic guessed what he meant and then wised him up not to repeat the explanation.

Middlesex Four Races Choate Today

The Middlesex School first crew will race the Choate School four this afternoon on Bateman's pond, Concord. The Middlesex second four will race the Cambridge Latin second crew. This will be the first race of the season for both the Middlesex and Choate crews.

Bill Sweeney After Harvard Coaching Job

The Harvard baseball committee has done nothing as yet about getting a professional coach for the team.

Percy Haughton is now in New York endeavoring to arrange business affairs so that he can take charge of the nine for the remainder of the year, but there is no certainty that he will be able to do so.

One of the many men who has applied for the position is Bill Sweeney, formerly captain of the Braves, later the Chicago Cubs, and who was with the Red Sox for a while this Spring.

U. of Maine Is Picked to Win Big Games

WATERVILLE, Me., May 15.—University of Maine is picked to win the twenty-first annual Maine interscholastic track and field meet here this afternoon. Maine has several star performers in the sprint and weight events.

Colby, Bowdoin and Bates also have some good men, and they will work their hardest to pull down the Maine athletes.

Ask Use of Stadium for A. A. U. Tryouts

Mayor James Curley has asked for the use of Soldiers Field for the holding of the eastern A. A. U. trials to send men to the Pan-American Exposition at San Francisco this Summer. No action has been taken as yet by the Harvard Athletic Association, but it is expected that the request will be granted.

Gillissie Is Second.

By winning from Carroll, 50 points to 35, in one of the fastest games of the series at the Imperial room, Gillissie secured second honors in the New England three-cushion championship tournament.

EXETER CHOICE IN SCHOOL MEET

The thirtieth annual Harvard Interscholastic and the Harvard-Yale freshman track meets will be held today in the Stadium on Soldiers Field. So as to simplify matters as much as possible, the Harvard management decided to run off the trial of the school boys this morning, and the semi-finals and finals will be held after the freshman have had their setto in the afternoon.

As the class of 1918 at Harvard is practically without track material, the freshman meet will be nothing but Yale. The youngsters from New Haven are a very likely looking bunch and many of them are varsity timber even at this early date. Captain J. Farwell is a hurdler of note. He is regarded as the fastest hurdler in Yale, and will have very little trouble taking first place in both of the timber topping events. A. Gurney and L. Williams, both of Yale, will race it out for the high honors in both the 100 and 220, while Orr and Walker, the two former Exeter stars, will outdistance all the crimson yearlings in the quarter.

Captain J. Coggeshall of the Harvard Freshman team is the only member of the crimson outfit who even threatens to win a first place, and he will be pushed very hard by H. C. Rolfe of Yale, who formerly ran for Exeter.

The big interest of the day is centred around the schoolboy meet, with 143 entries, representing twenty-five schools and academies. The Exeter boys arrived in town this morning and they are all confident that the championship will go back to New Hampshire with them. If some other school can cut in and grab some points away from Exeter in the middle distances and field events, the Huntington School may slip in and capture the meet.

Charles Ziegler, Wentworth, Marling, Clancy, Beebe, Verder and Rico are the men on whom Huntington School is banking their hopes. Ziegler, if he is anywhere near right, will come through a winner in the 100 and 220, while Marling should also get a place in these events. A. Rico, who won the shotput at the indoor meet, should repeat, but he will have a worthy opponent in R. F. Cleveland, the son of the late ex-President. Rico is also a good hurdler and will disappoint his followers if he does not place. Beebe and Clancy are both good middle-distance men and if they get inside the "money" they will greatly upset Exeter's dope and may be the means of swinging the meet to their school.

Koob Pitches Second No-Hit-No-Run Game

YPSILANTI, Mich., May 15.—Koob of the Kalamazoo Normal College, pitched his second no-hit game of the year here in a game against Ypsilanti Normal. Kalamazoo won, 6 to 1, the locals' one run being scored on three errors.

Earlier this Spring Koob hurled a no-hit game against Albion College and held the University of Michigan team to two hits in ten innings.

BALDWIN EXPECTS TO BEAT RITCHIE

By JACK CONWAY

Willie Ritchie has been made a favorite for his twelve-round bout with Matty Baldwin, which will be staged at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night. Baldwin, however, believes that he has an even chance to grab off the decision.

The Charlestown veteran is preparing for the tussle at Lynnfield. He is working out with Eddie Flynn, Tommy Doris and a couple of other ambitious young boxers and they keep him traveling at top speed all of the time.

"I have already beaten Ritchie once," said Matty today. "I clashed with the former lightweight champion in California in the Summer of 1911. It was a twenty-round bout and I had things pretty near all my own way. When the bell sounded at the end of the final frame, I was awarded the decision. It was one of the few decisions which Ritchie has lost during his career in the ring.

"The wise men believe that the Californian will dispose of me next Tuesday night. If you take the trouble to go over the 'dope,' you will discover that I have done my best work when I have been on the short end of the betting and I may be able to put over another surprise next week.

"I think I have something on Ritchie. I know his style of fighting and will be able to block many of his most effective punches, while I should be able to score with plenty of solid blows.

"I have had a good rest and consequently should enter the ring at my best. I am forced to admit that I am getting along in years and cannot fight once a week the way I used to, but when I have had a long layoff I usually come back and score with a big bang. Ritchie is a great puncher and a fine boxer, but I expect to outgeneral him the same as Welsh did when he clashed with the 'Frisco youth in London last Summer.

"If Ritchie expects to fatten his batting average at my expense, he is sure to receive a disagreeable surprise. That's all for the present. I will now prepare my little reception for Ritchie, which I will tender to him at the Arena next Tuesday night."

A Matter of Pride
Some folks behave themselves because it is expedient, others because they are being watched. But the people whom you admire most are those who conduct themselves properly because it is a matter of pride. In brewing ale there is one brewery in Boston that is proud of its reputation; proud of its product; proud of its name. Inborn honesty and native pride run together in the brewing of Boston's best offering.

EXPRESSION and light came into the great eyes, and she looked about her with a kind of startled delight. Tommy for some reason or other was trembling from head to foot.

A stick cracked. She turned her head toward the sound, but Professor Stilliter had made good his tiptoed retreat. He was no longer in sight.

Then Tommy, still trembling with wonder and excitement, rose from his hiding place and walked slowly toward her. Their eyes met, and the vision smiled the sweetest, most bewitching smile, and in the gentlest and richest voice that Tommy had ever heard she asked him an astonishing question:

"Are you a man?"

"Why, yes," said Tommy.

"Then," she said, "this must be the earth."

"Of course," he said; "you know that as well as I do."

"I wasn't sure," she said, "until you told me. You see, I've just come from heaven."

"Oh, my Lord!" said Tommy. "She's as mad as a hatter. How terrible! And yet she looks sane."

"I'm Celestia," resumed the vision, "and I've come from heaven to make people better and happier. I'm to begin with New York. Where is New York?"

She looked about her as if she expected to find it somewhere among the trees.

"It's a long way from here," said Tommy.

"Then I ought to start at once. Will you show me the way, please?"

"Why, yes, of course."

Then Professor Stilliter came back on the run.

"What the devil are you doing here?" he exclaimed. "Now don't get angry, old chap. This is one of my patients and—"

"I'm not angry," said Tommy, "and don't call me old chap."

Then Professor Stilliter sank his voice to a whisper. "Her mind," he said, "is in an exceedingly critical condition. Now you just vanish, will you? and leave her to me. She mustn't be upset."

"One condition of her mind," said Tommy, "appears to be fear of you."

Stilliter turned from him impatiently, "Come, Celestia," he said, "we'll go away now."

She shrank from his proffered hand.

"Celestia," said Tommy, "don't you want to go with him?"

"No," she said.

"Don't be afraid, then," said Tommy, "you sha'n't."

"Tommy Barclay," said Stilliter, "you keep out of this or you'll get into trouble. Come, Celestia."

She did not stir.

In a flash Stilliter had drawn a polished crystal from his pocket and was forcing the girl to look at it. As he did so, he said in a tone of command: "Sleep, Celestia, sleep."

Tommy simply stepped forward and knocked the crystal from Stilliter's hand, and Stilliter turned upon him with a howl of rage and attacked him with a shower of windmill blows. Tommy was no longer a small boy, but an athlete, in the early twenties.

He retreated slowly, guarding himself, and then, when he thought he had drawn Stilliter far enough from Celestia, he quietly reached in under the rain of blows and disarmed him. In other words, he removed those great black rimmed spectacles without which the great psychologist was blind and helpless.

"Perhaps I'm doing wrong," said Tommy, "but that girl's afraid of you and I'll take a chance."

He darted to the girl's side. "Are you afraid of me?"

"No."

"Then come."

He led her back to the trail and along it.

Stilliter stood as if in the midst of black night, groping with his hands, lest he dash his face against a tree, listening and cursing inaudible curses through his set teeth.

"Why in heaven's name," he thought," did I take the trouble to bring an extra pair and then leave them in the tent?"

Then fear overcame him, and he began to shout for help.

It was Tommy who answered the appeal.

"Listen," called Tommy, "and don't make such a noise. If you can find the place where Celestia was sitting you'll find your glasses. If not, I'll come back in a day or two and find them for you. You won't starve—not at your size."

Tommy laughed like a schoolboy, and turned to Celestia.

"Now let's beat it," he said, and he hurried her along the trail. "We'll just make a safe offing and then we'll decide how and where to go next. You're not exactly dressed for roughing it. That white thing wouldn't keep a fire warm. Hope you're warmly dressed underneath."

"Underneath," said Celestia, panting and without grammar, "there is only me."

The Marriage Trail
Another Clever Right-O Story

By DOROTHY DIX

"I NOTICE that a rich society spinster has been giving an interview in which she advises girls to hit the matrimonial trail," remarked the Bookkeeper.

"I don't observe that she takes her own advice," retorted the Stenographer.

"People never do," assented the Bookkeeper, "most of the matrimonial fans that I have ever met were old bachelors and spins. They advise the holy estate, and the domestic bliss stuff, while the folks who have gone through the matrimonial mill look about as battered up and as enthusiastic as Jack Johnson did when Jess Willard got through with him."

"There's a lot of difference between theory and practice," observed the Stenographer, "and one of the reasons that old maids are so strong for matrimony is because they haven't tried it, and haven't got any facts to the contrary to jolt them out of their dream about vine-wreathed cots, and little faces at the window pane, and a sturdy masculine arm on which a woman can lean and be protected from the cruel world.

"And it's the same way with those who are married. They advise you to stay single, because when they think of all the trials and tribulations of trying to stretch a one-horse-power income over a forty-horse-power family circle it looks to them as if anybody had just deliberately gone out of their way to hunt up trouble to get married."

"You bet," responded the Bookkeeper, "our kind friends hang out plenty of danger signals on both divisions of the road."

"That's right," agreed the Stenographer, "when I go to see my Aunt Mary, who is a spin with a good income, and a nice little home of her own, everything is so comfortable and quiet, and she's so free and independent that I think the bachelor girl life is the only life for me. But Aunt Mary was born to be spoiled at birth, and she says, 'an old maid's home is the abomination of desolation and lonesomeness. Get married and have children. That's the Heaven on Earth for a woman.'

"Then I go to see my sister Mamie, who is married, and has a grouchy husband and five children, and lives in an uproar that makes her house sound like a combination boiler factory and insane asylum. And Mamie is thin, and nerve wrecked, and shabby, and overworked, and never has a penny of her own, and she says, 'Be warned by me and stay single. Take it from me that any girl who has got a good job and her own pocketbook is the wise dame who freezes on to them.'

"It's a case of pay your money and trust to luck," said the Bookkeeper grimly. "Whichever way you do, you will wish you had done the other."

"In the face of all the evidence I wonder why people continue to marry," the Stenographer said, speculatively.

"It's the sporting blood," returned the Bookkeeper. "It's because matrimony is the biggest gamble on earth that we all want to take a flier in it."

"And because its capital prize is the best and biggest thing on earth, and we all have an inextinguishable hope that we will be the fortunate one who will draw it."

"Right-oh," chimed the Bookkeeper.

"Well, so far as I'm concerned," said the Stenographer, "I think I shall imitate the aforesaid spinster's notable example. I shall stand safe and sound on the bank, and urge other people to take the plunge by telling them that the water is fine."

THEIR MARRIED LIFE
A Rainy Day Puts Warren in a Temper

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

HELEN was kneeling on the rug in the living room helping Winifred build a castle with blocks. It was raining, and the shades had been lowered and the lights lit early. Rain always made Helen feel depressed, although she liked it and liked being out in it, but as she had said to her mother, who sat in an easy chair, the inevitable mending basket in her lap, this rain seemed cheerless and robbed the day of any kind of warmth.

Winifred was enjoying herself. Every few minutes she laughed merrily as her mother added another block to the toppling mass. Helen loved playing with her small daughter, but somehow she had little time for it. Some one was always wanting her and she was always scheduled to go somewhere, but of late she had been at home more than at any time that she could remember, in spite of the fact that Warren had bought a car.

The postman's whistle sounded, and a few minutes later the boy knocked on her door and handed her the mail. Helen came back to the living room, holding her small pile out gleefully.

"Quite a lot, mother. Wait a few moments, baby, then mother will play with you. See if you can't build a better castle than I did." And Winifred set to work as Helen dropped into a chair and looked over the letters. There were a couple of business letters for Warren, a letter for her mother from the West, which she handed up happily; a couple of magazines, and a letter for herself.

It bore the postmark "Colen," and Helen tore it open quickly and glanced over its contents. She looked up to say something to her mother, but, seeing that she was engrossed in the contents of her own mail, silently slipped it into the pocket of her skirt.

It happened to be a letter from Lieutenant Roberts, written just before he had left for his furlough. He would be in Boston a few days, he said, and would be very glad to call on them. Helen felt, somehow, that Warren would be anything but pleased, in spite of the fact that Lieutenant Roberts had been very pleasant during their stay. Sometimes Warren was unreasonable.

WARREN IS TOO IRRITABLE FOR GOOD COMPANY

Helen went back to the absorbing building of block houses, and a few minutes later Warren's key clicked in the lock as he let himself in. Nora got up hurriedly knocking down her latest effort as she did, and hastened out to greet him.

"Horrible weather," he said, as he slipped out of his overcoat and hung his hat up. "I think I've taken cold."

Helen was instantly solicitious and hovered about him tenderly. "Will you have something hot to drink, dear?"

Warren did not vouchsafe an answer, and she followed him into the living room. "Warren, please let me get you some quinine. Really, dear, you oughtn't let it go."

"Don't bother me with your old medicine," he said irritably. "That's the trouble with you, always dosing yourself with something and upsetting your stomach."

"But, Warren, you know how bad your colds always are. Won't you let me fix you something?"

"No, I tell you, leave me alone. I don't believe in medicine, a cold will always run its course anyway."

Helen helped Winifred pick up her blocks in silence, and then said in an undertone:

"Take them into grandma's room, dear." Warren hated to have the noise when he was cross and tired.

Warren was more and more cross. Helen was morose and refused to talk. Helen's ears burned hotly as he said several sharp things to her before her mother. Nora brought the soup in, and Warren pushed his plate back after a mouthful.

"What's the matter with this soup? Nora must have dropped the pepper box into it."

A BILL FOR A HAT ADDS TO THE TROUBLE

"It will be good for your cold," said Helen, smiling. But no amount of agreeable conversation had any effect on Warren's bad temper. The potatoes were cold, and he disliked French dressing on his salad. When the meal was finally concluded everyone left the table with a sigh of relief. Helen stayed behind to give Nora some directions, and when she finally went into the living room her mother was having a spirited discussion with Warren on the war.

"How do you feel?" she said tactlessly.

"Awful," he said, disagreeably, and then, pulling some envelopes from his pocket, he drew out some bills that they contained.

"Are these all right?" he asked, handing them over to her. "The bill from Croft's and Ordway's is steep, I can tell you."

"Some of the things I bought to go away are on it," Helen said, deprecatingly running her eyes rapidly down the account.

"What's this, Warren?" pointing to an item. "I'm sure I never got this."

The item was for a hat that Helen had not bought—she was positive of it. Eighteen fifty the amount was, and Helen had not purchased a hat since her white hat that she had bought in Panama.

"Just think it over," said Warren, sneeringly; "you'll be sure to remember."

In other cases when Helen had denied purchasing things she had sometimes recalled the incident, and Warren was always sure to jibe at her poor memory.

"I know I didn't buy it," she insisted, "but I'll go down tomorrow and see about it."

"All right," Warren said, roughly, "and try to be a little more careful with the bills. Business is bad at present and the stuff you charge is hardly worth anything. Try to practice a little economy if you can; you're not the wife of a millionaire, just remember that."

ZOE
The Story of a Great Love

(Copyright, 1913, Associated Newspapers, Ltd. Serial rights in U. S. A. held by International News Service.)

(By CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN.)

"CAN'T you speak, you idiot?" shouted Leveredge. "Tell me what you see!"

"I was saying, sir," stammered Mr. Hallcock vaguely, "that it's wonderful, sir—simply wonderful and"—

"Great Scot, man, look at the woman's face! What's happened? Can't you see, or—or am I dotty—"

"I don't know what you mean, sir," said Mr. Hallcock, looking away from the "Circe" into the purple face of Sir Leveredge. There was something almost pathetic in his look.

But Mr. Leveredge flung himself from his chair into his office and poured himself out a stiff glass of brandy. He was not at all sure of himself, and he was particularly anxious to get himself well in hand.

A ring at the door at the moment. Mr. Leveredge seized upon him eagerly.

"Send a wire to Mr. Crawley at once," he said, "asking him to come here immediately."

Then he returned to the "Circe" salon.

* * * * * * * *

Crawley finished his breakfast in a state of comparative ease of mind. He did not fully realize his danger, and there had undoubtedly been a certain sort of satisfaction in the result of his interview with Mr. Leveredge.

His was a nature which demanded the unusual, the romantic, the bizarre; and his early morning conversation with the great picture dealer had thoroughly satisfied his demands. Moreover, he could not help being very glad that he had been able to witness Mr. Leveredge's discomfiture; and, at the same time, he looked forward with a cynical calm and philosophic indifference to what all the time he realized to be the inevitable.

And the inevitable, as far as Mr. Leveredge was concerned, was the ruin of his wife, very long, that worthy gentleman would discover that some one had tampered very seriously with his precious "Circe."

HE HAD MADE AN ENTIRELY NEW FACE

From a purely artistic point of view it was, in Crawley's erudite mind, a moot point whether or not he had actually improved the picture. Hence his singular and unqualified elation of spirit on this sunny Spring morning. He had not mutilated the "Circe"; he had not spoiled it. The picture, despite his forebodings, was still a great work of art. He had been inspired last night. Some invisible and intangible power had guided his hand.

True it was that he had obliterated all trace of any likeness in his "Circe" to Mrs. Godfrey Brooke; and true also it was that she stood to him, as she had always done from the very moment he had first looked into her wonderful face, for the incarnation of beauty, the most superbly beautiful woman his imagination had ever conjured, still for all that he had not spoiled Leveredge's "Circe"—not from an artistic point of view.

Last night he had witnessed a rout de fresco. In two or three hours of diligent painting he had produced another "Circe." He had painted by electric light, and under the influence of intense excitement and conflicting emotions. Like a giant, he had, for the sake of himself and Brooke, and incidentally Zoe, crushed all the personal feeling from his mind, and had kept the artistic idea before him. But because his artistic nature told him that he had triumphed against the overwhelming odds, he was singularly glad and content.

A year or more before Zoe had come into his life to hurl tragedy across his path, he had painted a great deal from quite a different model—a beautiful girl in her way, with a lovely face, and copper-red hair. That picture had been a very pronounced Cockney accent had not troubled him. She was young, fresh and obedient. She also knew her business, as her mother and grandmother had done before her.

Her name was Polly Martin. Her mother had sat to Leighton and Millais, and to Frans Struck. Her grandmother had been immortalized by the mid-Victorians. She hung in the galleries of half a dozen European art centres.

The model's real name was Eliza Mary Jane Martin, and she lived with her maternal relative in Chelsea. She was eminently respectable, and only sat to her mother's permission to certain fully approved and very favored painters. Among these was Mr. Noel Crawley, to whom, indeed, it was an honor to sit.

Her name of Polly, by which the girl was know to the brethren of the brush, had been originally given to her by the South Kensington students, and had been confirmed by Paris and Munich, both of which Miss Martin knew well.

Crawley knew the girl's face by heart, and it was her face, slightly altered, which he had painted on to the Leveredge "Circe." He smiled to himself as he thought of Leveredge's chagrin; but the smile died abruptly with the realization of the denouement impending.

He finished his breakfast, wrote two or three letters, and started out for a constitutional, with no particular object in his mind, save a vague hope that he might meet Eva Warren, a hope that was, indeed, half a dread. A few hours of about a quarter of an hour did him a lot of good, and he felt even more optimistic than he had done over his breakfast.

He looked into his club in St. James' street, and chatted for a few minutes with several acquaintances, and then sat down to write to Zoe, returning her check. He found the task more difficult than he had anticipated, and had sat down for a quarter of an hour facing the only words he seemed able to write: "Dear Mrs. Brooke."

To Be Continued Monday.

Mark Twain and the Emperor
How the Humorist Met Franz Josef

AN amusing description of the introduction of the late Samuel Langhorne Clemens — "Mark Twain"—to the Emperor Franz Josef in the later 80s is given by Dr. Charles Vincent Herdliska, who, as secretary of the United States Embassy, effected the introduction.

Mr. Clemens was a good deal worried about what he should say to the Emperor. He told Dr. Herdliska that he feared he might be so overcome as to forget his little speech.

"Never mind," replied the secretary. "The Emperor will know what you intend to say. You have to send your speech to the Palace several days before you are presented. Then if his Majesty doesn't like what you are going to say he need not receive you. We shall find the Emperor standing in the centre of the large reception hall in the Palace, and together we shall cross the floor to him, and I shall speak the words of presentation. When the Emperor has replied, you will say your say in English, addressing it to me, and I will repeat it to the Emperor in German. His Majesty will then reply to me in German, and I will translate his reply to you."

"But all there will be to it?" asked the humorist, with visible disappointment.

"That will be all. And don't offer to shake hands. That would be an unpardonable breach of Court etiquette. As soon as we have exchanged greetings we shall withdraw."

On the appointed day, Mr. Clemens and Dr. Herdliska appeared at the Palace. Between double lines of guards the two Americans were ushered through room after room until they reached the threshold of the audience chamber.

The door of the reception hall swung open and the humorist and secretary advanced toward the solitary figure of the aged monarch. All three bowed, and Doctor Herdliska spoke his formal words of presentation. The Emperor replied. Mr. Clemens then began his speech, but had not repeated more than a sentence or two when the Emperor spoke a few words in German to Doctor Herdliska, and turning on his heel, started across the floor towards a distant door. The secretary started to follow; but Mr. Clemens, who understood German imperfectly, clutched his arm, whispering: "Hold on, doctor! That isn't according to your instructions. Shall I go on with my speech?"

Doctor Herdliska explained that the Emperor had said: "Tell Mr Clemens he need not finish his speech. I have already read it. Both of you come to my library."

Much relieved, Mr. Clemens followed Dr. Herdliska into the Emperor's study, where His Majesty put all formality aside and entertained the two Americans for an hour.

The interview came to an end in quite a mellow mood; his fear of royalty was a thing of the past. The Emperor's cigars were very much to his liking.

The interview came to an end the Emperor did a most unusual thing; he extended his hand to Mr. Clemens, who gave it a hearty grasp.

And when Dr. Herdliska and his companions reached the latter's hotel they found the Emperor had done another unusual thing—he had sent a servant to the author's apartment with a dozen boxes of the cigars that had given the humorist so much satisfaction.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were stronger at the opening and during the first few minutes there was further improvement in the tone of markets. Some issues gained a point or more within fifteen minutes from the start. Sentiment was calmer on exchanges, reflecting public sentiment all over the country. Whatever may be the perils of the international situation, it is recognized everywhere that business is improving in the United States and that it never before had such material resources for meeting any emergency.

In London, when that market closed, Americans were steadier and a number showed gains, including Amalgamated ⅝, Southern Pacific ⅝, Union Pacific 1¼ and U. S. Steel ⅝. Canadian Pacific was 1½ higher. It is reported that British financiers are well satisfied with President Wilson's note to Germany.

While it is understood that buying of copper is not on a large scale at present, the price asked by large producers is still 19 cents and in some quarters it is believed they may advance it as soon as the foreign demand increases. It is claimed that domestic consumption of copper is growing steadily. Both lead and spelter are firm.

LESS SELLING PRESSURE.

There was less selling pressure in New York when that market opened and many traders were of the opinion that liquidation had been excessive. All admitted that the technical position had greatly improved. There was more demand for war order issues, Bethlehem Steel, Baldwin Locomotive, American Locomotive, Pressed Steel Car and Westinghouse being among those which made large gains immediately.

EARLY NEW YORK GAINS.

Among the early gains in New York were Amalgamated 1, American Can 1¾, American Smelting 1, Anaconda 1, Inspiration 1¼, Utah Copper 1, Chino ⅝, Atchison ¾, Baltimore & Ohio 1¾, Canadian Pacific 1¾, New Haven 1½, Northern Pacific 1¼, Reading ¾, Southern Pacific 1¼, Union Pacific 1¾, U. S. Steel 1½, American Locomotive 2, American Car and Foundry 2, Bethlehem Steel 3, Goodrich ¾, Maxwell Motor 1½, Mexican Petroleum 1½, Pressed Steel Car 3, U. S. Rubber 1¾ and Westinghouse 2¾. Some of these issues had lost a part of their earlier gains.

COPPERS UP HERE.

There was an improvement in the tone of the Boston market and local coppers averaged higher. Among early advances were Calumet & Arizona ½, Copper Range ⅝, Granby ½, Isle Royale 1, North Butte ½, Superior 1¾ and Tamarack 1. Alaska Gold was a point higher. Zinc showed gains, Butte & Superior being up 1½, and American Zinc ¾. United Fruit was up 1, Shoe Machinery 1¼ and New Haven ¾.

CLOSING STOCK PRICES.

Closing prices today of leading Boston and New York stocks are given below. For earlier prices see table on Page 10.

BOSTON STOCKS.

SCENE ALONG AVENUE OF PALMS IN FRONT OF PALACE OF EDUCATION.

Another Page of Photographs and 10-Vote Coupon Tomorrow

They're off! Off on the last lap of the AMERICAN'S race for the twenty-five DE LUXE trips to the Pacific Coast and the Panama Expositions.

With the publication of yesterday's coupon, the first half of this remarkable competition came to a close—and before the candidates realize it the final end will have come.

The AMERICAN will print two weeks from tomorrow, in the Sunday AMERICAN, May 30, the first vote standing of all candidates in the contest. This will include all votes polled in both Series "A" and "B." Series "C" will follow shortly after this publication.

One of the candidates who called at the Contest Headquarters yesterday morning was asked by the Editor: "How is your vote-gathering campaign progressing?"

Her answer was: "I'm not doing very much now until I see the first vote standing. I want to see how I stand in the race before I do much more."

It did not take the Contest Editor very long to make clear to this candidate that she was making a very serious mistake in permitting a single day to pass without exerting every effort to secure the largest possible number of votes.

What does it matter how many or how few votes "the other fellow" may have? It's your own vote total that your are interested in—not that of some other candidate—and don't forget that human nature is such that there are probably hundreds who will drop out of the race as soon as they see that some one has a temporary lead on them.

That's just the spot where the courageous, plucky, earnest workers will benefit, because they will stick everlastingly at the daily vote-gathering grind, and those that drop out only make the path easier for the real fighters.

So make every day count, candidates. The race is fast approaching its end, and some twenty-five among you will earn the right to the most marvelous trips ever conceived by any newspaper.

Another page of candidates' photographs and the big 10-vote coupon will appear in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Candidates, and the friends of candidates, are again reminded that all Series "C" coupons must be in the hands of the Contest Editor or mailed on or before 5 p. m., Monday, May 17.

Friends of the candidates should see that all votes are sent to their favorites in ample time to be turned in before the time limit expires.

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

Can We Limit the Use of Submarines in War?

The administration has every reason to be gratified by the unity with which the people have rallied to the support of its German policy. The world beyond our borders cannot fail to be impressed by the fact that there is but one American mind concerning the question of the protection of neutral rights on the oceans.

The nation and the world will have cause to regard as one of the greatest and historic expressions of American determination this last paragraph of the President's letter:

> The Imperial German government will not expect the government of the United States to omit any word or any action necessary to the performance of its sacred duty of maintaining the rights of the United States and its citizens and of safeguarding their free exercise and enjoyment.

It is, however, unfortunate that the chance for immediate German acceptance of the contentions of the United States should be put in jeopardy by the President's sweeping attack upon the use of submarine blockading operations.

The AMERICAN pointed out yesterday the opportunity this presented to the German Foreign Office for a retort that would not be palatable to the United States. This view of that feature of the note we notice is also taken by two of the most thoughtful New York evening papers. That papers of this class, unquestionably the most carefully edited from their conservative viewpoint, should thus reiterate the AMERICAN'S opinion is significant.

The Evening Post, after discussing the demands which it thinks Germany may probably concede, goes on to say:

> Even if she were able to satisfy the United States in this particular case there would still remain the enormous difficulty of meeting our insistence upon the abandonment of her whole plan of submarine warfare as it affects merchant vessels with Americans lawfully on board. To overcome that will take time and thought. It would also involve, one would say, the giving way in the German government itself of the champions of Schrecklichkeit, who have been so long in the ascendant. This may seem highly improbable.

In a letter so largely made up of absolutely justifiable demands to which any reasonable nation, however hot its war-time temper, might be expected to accede it was a pity to include anything that put ENORMOUS DIFFICULTY in the way of an amicable agreement.

The Brooklyn Eagle goes even farther in its dissent from this part of the note, saying:

> But much more serious is that part of the note in which to all intents and purposes the German government is told to confine her submarine activities to ships of war.
>
> This leaves an opening. It furnishes the Berlin Foreign Office with an opportunity of which it will not be slow to take advantage.
>
> What policy Germany shall pursue at sea becomes a matter regarding which this country may make suggestions or take action when the rights of its citizens are invaded.
>
> Should a British merchantman be sunk without warning and all on board be lost a protest from Washington would be in order only if the lives of Americans were sacrificed. Otherwise would come the espousal of a cause not our own.
>
> We cannot, or should not, attempt to dictate the conditions under which German submarines shall operate. We cannot, or should not, either dictate or suggest that their activities be circumscribed so long as they are not such as interfere with the rights of the people of this country. And nothing is more likely than that the German government will have something to this effect to say.
>
> Nor is anything less likely than that it will abandon its pursuit of merchantmen.

If Germany were not so sorely beset on every side it is probable that this error in our diplomatic note might lead to serious consequences. As it is, probably nothing more serious will result than a rejoinder, which may not be any too palatable to Americans but which the administration has to some degree invited.

Delay may be caused by the necessity of readjusting the form of our demands, but "THE MAIN PURPOSE OF THE NOTE, A PURPOSE WHOLLY DEFENSIBLE BY EVERY PRINCIPLE OF INTERNATIONAL LAW AND EVERY CONSIDERATION OF HUMANITY, A PURPOSE BACK OF WHICH THE AMERICAN PEOPLE ARE LINED UP AS A SINGLE COHESIVE FORCE, MUST, DESPITE THIS INITIAL ERROR, BE VINDICATED AND MAINTAINED."

ANOTHER article by Mr. Elbert Hubbard, who perished when the Lusitania was destroyed by a German submarine, will be printed on this page next Tuesday. These articles were prepared for the American by Mr. Hubbard, prior to his departure for Europe, to be used during his absence. Added interest no doubt attaches to them owing to their author's tragic death.

"Latest News from Berlin"

Berlin, New Hampshire; Berlin, Vermont; Berlin, Connecticut; Berlin, Massachusetts, OR Berlin, Germany, Will Be Found Prominently Displayed in the Sunday American Tomorrow—OTHER Features of New England's Greatest Sunday Newspaper.

"How much do you think we would be willing to pay for ten first-class ships—if we were at war?"

The question is asked in the full-page editorial which will be printed in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

New York City alone, answers the writer, would gladly buy and pay for twenty of them, without a question or any bargaining, rather than submit to ONE bombardment. And the same is true of San Francisco and a dozen other American cities.

The Sunday AMERICAN editorial is not only timely but VITALLY IMPORTANT. Its subject is striking. "Japanese Rats Could Eat Our Feet." THAT is the subject of tomorrow's editorial.

The scientist will tell you that there was no animal powerful enought to encounter the dinosaur, matching him ton for ton in MERE WEIGHT. But he was wiped out of existence by small, dangerous enemies with sharp teeth, that attacked his feet, gnawed them, and destroyed HIM.

The huge dinosaur disappeared, because, while he was building up a huge body and terrific weight, he neglected his fighting teeth.

We urge a CAREFUL reading of this Sunday AMERICAN editorial upon every thoughtful, patriotic American in New England. In our opinion, this means EVERYBODY in New England. There are no "LITTLE Americans" in New England. These six States are near enough to the salt water to believe in a United States Navy big enough to suggest to the rest of the world that treading on the tail of Uncle Samuel's coat is NOT a healthful out-door pastime.

"Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise."

Words taken from the Book of Proverbs, twentieth chapter, first verse.

From this text the Rev. William A. Sunday, the most famous living American evangelist, preaches in the Sunday AMERICAN tomorrow his famous sermon on "Booze." If every male person in New England will take twenty minutes tomorrow to hear Billy Sunday on the question of drink, the Demon Rum will be limping around Boston Common before Saturday night on one leg.

Sunday tells how George Stuart imagined that he inquired of various kinds of mills what sort of product they turned out.

"He goes up to another mill and says:—

"'Hey, what kind of a mill are YOU?'

"'A gin mill.'

"'What is YOUR raw material?'

"'The boys of America!'

"The gin mills of this country," Mr. Sunday says, "must have 2,000,000 boys or shut up shop. Walk down your streets, count the homes; every fifth home has to furnish a boy for a drunkard!

"Have YOU furnished YOURS? No? Then I have to furnish TWO, to make up!"

We SHALL not advise the mothers and fathers of New England to read the Billy Sunday section of tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN. We know they WILL read it. We believe they will pass it along to the boys.

Readers continue to discuss interestingly the question raised by Miss Elizabeth Gale: "Can nobody be a Christian who dances?" More answers to this question appear in the Billy Sunday section tomorrow, including that of the clergyman who declares that the dance is NOT immoral unless it is a disreputable dance. "One may dance to heaven," says another writer, "—or to hell."

OUR idea of dancing is suggested by a page of pictures of the Boston-Brookline-Arlington young ladies who appear in the out-of-doors, next Thursday afternoon at Jamaica Plain, to dance in bare feet and Grecian costumes.

This "Spring Masque" will take place on the green of the Wallis estate, at the corner of Centre and Allandale streets.

And,—whisper—the proceeds will be devoted to the nursing associations and the ANTI-suffragists.

Whatever you think about suffrage, anti-suffrage, dancing, or bare feet, you are SURE to like the Sunday AMERICAN pictures—a whole page of them—of the barefoot dancers.

"Shocking?"

"Tut, tut!"

No, in-DEEDY!

Artistic!

Report comes up from Rocklandtown, nearby in Plymouth County, that somebody has done clamped the lid on, in that thriving community, and that it is as hard to get a regular drink down there as it is to fill out the ticket at a Republican caucus in Georgia.

One of our young men has been down to interview Chief of Police Burke about it. He has seen other Rockland notables, our young man has, in Rockland AND in Boston, and the result is one of those entertaining neighborhood chronicles for which the Sunday AMERICAN is famous.

John Moynahan, the gifted director of the AMERICAN'S art department, attended that mock trial the other night at the City Club where certain prominent ciubmen were arraigned on charges of "graft."

Mr. Moynahan was asked to REPORT the affair. He does so on a page of the Sunday paper. The Moynahan cartoons of Judge Harris, Guy Ham, "Loole" Coolidge, Edmund Billings and William E. Hingston are among the best work of a newspaper artist whose professional standing is acknowledged throughout the country. Moynahan's "Judge Harris" will be found to be in a class by itself. And "Moy's" Guy Ham is equally as good.

Our attention is directed by Mr. C. O'Connell Galvin to a great Catholic organization whose activities are confined exclusively to Massachusetts but which, nevertheless, boasts 41,026 members and has assets of $787,497.50. This is the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, 800 delegate members of which come to town this week for the thirty-sixth annual convention.

This Massachusetts organization, seldom mentioned beyond the immediate sphere of its influence, since 1879 has paid out in death benefits in Massachusetts more than five million dollars! The Sunday AMERICAN story of the M. C. O. F. convention, illustrated, will be informing as well as interesting.

Mention Salem, and what great American author is suggested?

Speak of Nathaniel Hawthorne, and what New England city do you think of?

Wherefore, concerning a truly GREAT feature of tomorrow's best Sunday newspaper in New England, we shall say no more than that Mr. Julian Hawthorne offers an account of his visit, a day or two ago, to the old home city of his famous father.

We shall not urge THIS story upon you, beyond saying that we expect always to point to it as an example of the finest writing ever offered to the Boston public through the medium of the daily press. All who love Hawthorne will like his son's account of a visit to the (alleged) "House of the Seven Gables."

Many other features of the Sunday AMERICAN might and should be called to your attention, but you see how it is! WHY do they build newspaper columns so short and so narrow?

Jess Willard, the American champion of the world, says the foreword of his Sunday AMERICAN series of lessons on health and strength and clean living. Jess starts off by saying that he is neither a smoker nor a drinking man.

The magazine section consists of twelve pages of life, ginger, zip, sizz and entertainment.

In the comic section—admittedly the GREATEST comic section of any Sunday newspaper—Mr. Hooligan observes, after trying again to get a best man, that, "the boint child dreads the fire." Poor Happy!

Which MIGHT remind us that the surest way to avoid hearing our newsdealer report that he is "all sold out of Sunday AMERICANS" is to order the Sunday AMERICAN on Saturday.

N. B.—And the LATEST word from Berlin and way stations.

In-Shoots

The trouble with most of the advice is that it has generally been offered at the wrong time.

Some invalids seek every tonic save work.

A little knowledge judiciously applied will give one the reputation of a sage.

Nobody loves a fat man with a lean pocketbook.

A man can insist that wealth is a burden and yet break his back holding on to his share.

One charitable act will occasionally cause a man to pat himself on the back for many months.
